Who Understands Finance?
An Infectious Idea
Bad Vatican City News
Pity the Oil Men

—By Arthur Brisbane—

GERMANY'S TROUBLES, the troubles of Austria-Hungary, and so forth, puzzle the "wise financiers." Just what it all means, they cannot tell you. The ordinary individual sees one thing plainly.

Germany was beaten by the Allies, Alsace-Lorraine and her colonies taken from her. The Allies then arranged a pleasant program, by which they would have taken from a beaten and impoverished nation hundreds of billions in gold every year.

It sounded like planning to take ten pounds of flesh each week from a sick kitten. The plan did not work.

Just how sick the kitten is, by this time, nobody knows. But there is great power and ability in Germany, and the fact that the Versailles treaty compelled the Germans to discontinue gigantic expenses for a standing army and navy must have helped.

Perhaps it will all come out beautifully and smoothly in the end. One fact seems established, namely, that we are not going to get back the ten billions that we lent to Europe.

But that will not "break us," or cause any very deep grief, if Europe's nations will get on their feet, stop their hating, warring, throat-cutting and thieving, and make their governments act as decent citizens act toward each other.

The average American reads with satisfaction instructions sent by President Hoover to Secretary Stimson, who will take part in the conference of nations in London.

The Secretary's instructions are to interest himself in the ECONOMIC QUESTIONS involved, and, by implication, he is instructed to keep out of political matters and any others, not immediately concerning Germany's present financial plight.

It is alleged, authenticity not guaranteed, that when Calvin Coolidge was asked his opinion of the suggested moratorium in Europe, he replied: "That kind of thing is infectious."

With wheat on the farm at 25 cents a bushel, in some places, and oats at 15 cents a bushel, a moratorium has already been suggested by farmers. That would mean the right to discontinue all payments on mortgages, notes at banks, International Harvesting Co. bills, etc., until further notice.

It is an "infectious" idea, but it will not be adopted here.

Alexander Legge, who used to be head of the farm board, surprises the National Livestock Association with the statement that our farms are "thoroughly solvent," and that "agriculture is better off than any other American industry."

He says the farmers own forty-three billion dollars' worth of tilled land, even after deflation, and the mortgages total only nine and a half billions. Railroads, and the other big corporations are all worse off.

News from the Vatican City tells of a bomb placed in St. Peter's Cathedral, close to the great altar where the Pope celebrates mass on important occasions. The bomb, discovered and removed to the Vatican Gardens, exploded six hours later, tearing up the ground, destroying several beautiful trees.

On behalf of the Italian government it is suggested that the bomb was placed by anti-Fascists, that the explosion in St. Peter's might arouse hatred against the government.

Mussolini and the Vatican City authorities combined will solve the mystery, and, let us hope, detect the criminal.

It is desirable to help Europe, if we can, for, if Europe sinks, it would be bad for us.

It would be desirable to help various things in the United States also, if that were possible.

For instance, the "Independent Petroleum Association of America," with headquarters in Tulsa, Okla., says "because of shrinkage in the value of crude oil in the Mid-Continent area, the daily loss in new capital in this area is $1,696,000."

Multiply that considerable sum by 365, and you have $619,040,000, worth thinking about.

It is largely due to a drop in the value of crude oil, from $1.29 a barrel in 1930, to 33 cents and lower in 1931.

Oil in the United States reminds you of little Alice's Cheshire cat. It gradually disappeared until nothing but the smile was left. In the case of the oil industry, it isn't a cheerful smile.

This will interest farmers, "trying to make cows pay." The big Sheffield Farms Milk Co. cuts the price of cream 25 per cent, and you can buy half a pint of cream for 18 cents.

Cows would pay well if farmers could get that price. One trouble with the world, especially in farming, is TOO EXPENSIVE DISTRIBUTION.

GERMANS TO CONFER WITH STIMSON AND MELLON

Paris, July 18 (AP)—Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany wound up their conference with French government representatives at 7:30 o'clock this evening, when it was announced they would have a conference at the American Embassy tonight with Secretary Stimson, Secretary Mellon and Ambassador Edge.

WARRANTS FOR TWO IN $150,000 JEWEL THEFT

Warrants for the arrest of H. Maison and H. Simmons, both of Chicago, sought for the $150,000 jewelry robbery of Saul Lenowsky of New York at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, were granted today by Judge Devlin in municipal court. A bellhop told police he saw the two alleged holdup men and could identify them.

FIREMAN HELD FOR RINGING FALSE ALARM

George Brennan, a fireman attached to Engine 3 of the Belmont fire department, and a companion, John A. Stamin, were arraigned in East Cambridge court today, charged with calling out Brennan's mates on a false alarm early today. Brennan pleaded not guilty and Stamin pleaded guilty. Their cases were continued until July 21.

ROXBURY FIREMAN BURNED IN AUTO BLAZE

Fireman William Lanigan, 45, of the Roxbury fire department, received burns today when his auto burst into flames while he was repairing it in the rear of his home, 20 Greenwood st., Roxbury. He was treated at City Hospital.

MERCY ESCORT INJURED BY HIT-RUN DRIVER

Motorcycle Officer John F. Smith of the Bridgeport police was seriously injured while escorting an auto carrying respiratory machines from Boston to Bridgeport in a vain attempt to save the lives of two children. Smith, knocked from his machine by a truck, received a fractured leg and thigh.

NOTED ARCHITECT DIES SUDDENLY

San Francisco, July 18 (INS)—Dr. John Galen Howard, 67, one of America's foremost architects, died suddenly of heart disease in a Turkish bath today. He was born at Chelmsford, Mass.

MILTON TAX RATE TAKES DROP

A reduction of $1.20 in the tax rate from $26.80 to $25.60 was announced today by the Milton board of assessors. The increase in real and personal valuation for 1931 is $1,820,350, bringing the total valuation to $36,375,150.

THOUSANDS SEE MARIPOSA SLIDE DOWN WAYS

PARLEY WILL DECIDE FATE OF EUROPE

Germans at Paris Meet With Laval in Effort to Make a Real Entente

BULLETIN

London, July 18 (INS)—A report that the United States would "spring a surprise" at the conference of ministers to be held in London Monday by proposing an armament holiday to run concurrently with the Hoover moratorium plan was current in diplomatic circles here today.

Efforts to confirm the report were unavailing, but one leading member of the diplomatic corps stationed in London said he "wouldn't be surprised" if such a proposal were made.

Paris, July 18 (AP)—Negotiations fraught with importance to France and Germany began today in the office of Premier Laval less than an hour after Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany arrived from Berlin.

It is the first time a German Chancellor has been in Paris officially since 1871 when Bismarck came to proclaim the German Empire at Versailles at the end of the Franco-Prussian war.

Both the Germans and the French regard this meeting today as equal in importance to the conferences after the World War, and both sides agree that the peace of Europe depends upon the outcome.

FACE DIFFICULT TASK

It is not going to be easy, for the German representatives have made it clear that they are not in Paris to accept French demands, and the French have said that they do not intend to take part in a conference of ministers at London on Monday unless they

ANNA CASE WEDDED TO MAGNATE

Anna Case Goes to Altar With Clarence Mackay at Roslyn, L. I.; Berlins at Wedding

New York, July 18 (AP)—Clarence H. Mackay, chairman of the board of directors of the Postal Telegraph & Cable Corp., and Miss Anna Case, concert soprano and for eight years a member of the Metropolitan Opera Co., were married today at St. Mary's Catholic church, Roslyn, L. I.

Only members of the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom were present, including the bride's mother, Mrs. Peter Van Nuys Case, of South Branch, N. J., Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Berlin, and Mr. and Mrs. John W. Mackay.

BRIDE A CONVERT

Mrs. O'Brien and Mrs. Berlin are Mr. Mackay's daughters, and John W. Mackay is his son.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Vincent Donovan, assisted by the Rev. Edward C. McManus. Miss Case was confirmed in the Catholic church a month ago by Cardinal Hayes. She formerly was a member of the Dutch Reformed church. Mr. and Mrs. Mackay left for a motor trip immediately after the ceremony.

The bride's gown was of white lace. She wore a white hat and carried lilies of the valley. A breakfast party at Harbor Hill, Mr. Mackay's estate near Roslyn, followed the ceremony.

FIRST WIFE DIVORCED

The bride is 42 and Mr. Mackay is 57. He was married in 1898 to the late Katherine Duer. They were divorced 16 years later in Paris, and the day after the divorce was granted she married Dr. Joseph A. Blake. She died several years ago.

'DECOY' IN FORGERY PLOT

CLAIMS SHE IS INNOCENT VICTIM OF HIS PLOT

Arrested in Rich Bostonian's Studio, She Declares Suspect Only Platonic Friend

Mary Victoria Lemieux, 21, taken into custody following the arrest of Louis E. Sweetland, charged with $10,000 forgeries, styled herself to police today as an innocent victim of circumstances and told of platonic love for her "mystery man."

The girl was arrested early today in "The Blues," Bohemian studio in Provincetown of a wealthy Boston clubman. Police and Burns' detectives conveyed her to Boston police headquarters, where they queried her and then held her on suspicion.

Sweetland, former Arlington tax collector, had been sought for three years for passing bad checks. He was arrested in a Peterboro st., Back Bay, apartment yesterday. Police are seeking another man and two girls they charge he used as accomplices.

SHE REVEALS "PLOT"

Miss Lemieux, who said her home is in Skowhegan, Me., is alleged to have stated to authorities that Sweetland posed as a federal agent.

Police sought her under the name of Doris La Marr, but when taken into custody she revealed that her correct name was Lemieux. She told police:

"Sweetland told me he was a federal dry agent and that he was on duty making the rounds of drug stores which, he said, were overloaded with 'alky.'

"I waited outside of the drug stores when he went in. He always came out with a check. It was graft he got for letting them operate, he told me.

"We always cashed the checks at the banks and never had any trouble. The tellers told us they were not obliged to ask us for our identity when the check was made out to cash.

THOUGHT IT "GRAFT"

"He took me on good times, but never to dance. I didn't love him, but I admired him. He was my mystery man and that was what drew me to him. He never kissed me and we were never other than platonic friends.

"Sweetland always gave me half his receipts. I saw nothing wrong in that because I thought it was graft, and if they were willing to pay it to him, it wasn't my affair."

Miss Lemieux said she lives on

CARDINAL WILL HEAD PILGRIMS

Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston and ranking American cardinal, will head a pilgrimage of members of his flock, as well as many Catholics from the New England diocese, to the Eucharastic congress to be held in Dublin, Ireland, in June, 1932.

For some time word had crossed the Atlantic that relatives of Americans in Ireland were asking about the probability of Cardinal O'Connell's attending the Eucharistic congress, especially as it is to be held in the land of his forefathers.

Returning tourists who have visited the old country in their travels declare that a rousing welcome awaits the illustrious namesake of Daniel O'Connell, the great Irish liberator.

It is learned on reliable authority that one of the newer vessels in the Boston service has been chartered to take the Cardinal and his pilgrims to the Congress.

It is expected more than 1000 will make the pilgrimage. The steamer will sail direct from Boston to Dublin Bay, where it will anchor and be the home of the pilgrims while the Congress is in session.

This provision is made, it is stated, in order to give the Boston and New England pilgrims under the Cardinal the most comfortable facilities.

It is planned that an, who desire to return direct to the United States at the conclusion of the Eucharastic Congress may sail from Dublin Bay in time to reach Boston on July 4.

MAN ENDS LIFE IN DORCHESTER

The body of Harold Lashans, 25, of 27 Savin st., Dorchester, was found hanging from a disconnected gas jet in the bathroom of his home by his wife, Betty, early today. Police rushed him to City Hospital, but he was pronounced dead on arrival there by Dr. Daniel T. McSweeney.

His wife told police he had attended the wedding of a friend last night and returned home shortly after midnight and retired, apparently in the best of spirits. She could offer no explanation for his act.

Miss Baker Bride of French Captain

Holyoke, July 18 (AP)—Miss Jean Sanford Baker, artist and former member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Capt. J. Bernard Von Russeum-Shiffanz of France, were married today in the rectory of St. Paul's church by Rev. Franklin Knight.

The bride is the daughter of Curtiss and Alice (Sanford) Baker.

Brookline Tax Rate Set at $20.40

MOTORCYCLIST DIES IN CRASH

An unidentified youth was killed today when the motorcycle he was riding crashed into a truck at Washington st., and Archdale rd., Forest Hills, and sent him hurtling against an iron police patrol box.

The motorcycle bore a New York license plate, but no registration could be found on the boy's person.

The crash occurred when the truck, driven by Wilbur J. Murray 17 of 65 Hastings st., West Roxbury, was turning into a gasoline station on Washington st. The motorcycle, which was following closely, struck the front wheel of the truck, throwing the youth 20 feet into the air and down against the iron upright.

Police of West Roxbury rushed the boy, unconscious, to City Hospital, where he died a few minutes later.

WOMAN FRIEND REFUSES TO CLAIM TURNER'S BODY

SAYS SHE LOST HER INTEREST IN SLAYER

Gray-Haired Teacher Who Aided Him Sorry to Hear of His Death

Augusta, Me., July 17—As Benjamin H. Turner, life term slayer, lay dead in the State hospital here, victim of a hunger strike, Mrs. Constance Kilbern, school teacher, who once stanchly befriended him, today said her interest had melted away.

Mrs. Kilborn is the gray-haired woman who helped free Turner from a Mexican prison where he faced a slaying charge and later came to his aid when he was on trial for murder in Portland.

County Atty. H. C. Marden today started a probe to place responsibility in Turner's death.

PROBE DEMANDED

A second investigation loomed when the hospital board of trustees demanded of Gov. Gardiner and his Executive Council today that they probe the sending of sane but dangerous criminals to the hospital, thus overcrowding the criminal ward.

Previously, Dr. F. C. Tyson, superintendent of the hospital, charged that Warden Charles E. Lincoln of State Prison let Turner go too far and then passed him "a sane man" over to the hospital when it was too late.

The board of trustees alleged prisoners who had been adjudged sane by alienists were termed insane by incompetent officials and transferred from prison to the state hospital.

Atty. Marden ordered that Turner's body be held pending the completion of his inquiry.

"I am not interested in Turner and have not been for some time."

Mrs. Kilborn told the Boston Evening American.

KNOWS MORE NOW

"It is true I offered to be of every assistance possible at the time of the Hallen murder, but I am older now and see things differently.

"I have learned a few things since about Turner that has caused me to lose interest in him.

"I am sorry to hear of his death, but I will not claim the body."

When Turner was tried for the murder of James D. Hallen at Falmouth Foreside, Mrs. Kilborn alone stood by him.

She revealed that Turner may have come north from Mexico to revenge her financial loss as well as his own.

BAPTISMAL DATA USED TO FREE 'RED FLAME'

Counsel for Ann Burlak to Introduce Church Record in Fight for Freedom

Counsel for Ann Burlak, "Red Flame" of the strike riots in Central Falls, R. I., who faces deportation, announced today that he has a baptismal certificate from Northampton, Pa., with which he will seek to prove she was born in the United States.

Harry Hoffman, counsel for Miss Burlak, stated that the certificate disclosed that his client was born on May 24, 1911, in Slatington, Pa., and was baptized the same day in a Greek Catholic church in Northampton. It is not, however, a birth certificate.

The certificate will be presented to immigration authorities in an attempt to free Miss Burlak, and a petition for a writ of habeas corpus will be filed on Monday in case there are further delays in effecting her release, Hoffman said.

The possibility of the "Red Flame's" release coupled with the announcement of strikers' committees in Pawtucket and Central Falls that "peaceful picketing" would be resumed Monday, caused police today to voice a fear of further outbreaks of rioting.

Police of Central Falls and Pawtucket issued statements that no picketing of any kind would be permitted in either city.

Several departments of the Royal Weaving mill, opened last week, will continue in operation, with police maintaining their guard, it was announced.

Walsh Invited to Railway Mail Outing

Baseball, golf, horseshoe pitching and other games will feature the outing of the First Division, Railway Mail Service, to be held at the Riverside recreation grounds, Auburndale, from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. Tuesday.

Invited guests include Senators David I. Walsh and Moses, and Congressmen Dallinger and McCormack, A. A. Fisher, general superintendent of Railway Mail Service; Chas. C. Goyer, deputy second assistant postmaster-general; H. W. Strickland, industrial secretary of Railway Mail Association.

Germany Can't Pay, Fruit Is Diverted

London, July 18 (AP)—Half a million dollars' worth of fruit from New Zealand and California, originally shipped to Germany, has been diverted to England because the Germans cannot afford to pay for it.

"This means," says the Daily Herald, "that great quantities of produce will be thrown on London and other markets and probably sold much below normal prices. The prospect has caused great alarm."

Industries Asked to Aid Employment

Washington, July 18 (AP)—A new move for obtaining co-operation of more than 200 trade associations to stimulate employment in each industry was announced today by Secretary Chairman Croxton of the President's emergency committee for employment.

A letter was sent executives of the various trade groups asking specific co-operation, both in the adoption of emergency policies and in long term planning to maintain industrial employment.

Army Flier Blamed for Damage to House

Springfield, July 18 (AP)—An annual aftermath of the Army Air Corps maneuvers here in May is a claim for damages alleged to have been caused by air vibration set up by planes which investigated today by Lieut. G. L. Saillsbury.

James McCallum, who lives near Springfield Airport, over which part of the manuevers took place, claimed plastering in his home fell as a result of the vibration.

Friend No More

Mrs. Constance Kilborn, gray-haired friend of Benjamin H. Turner, lifer, who died of hunger strike, refuses to claim his body, saying she has lost all interest in him.

DUCE ACCUSES 5 EDITORS OF PAPAL ATTACK

Pamphlet Suggesting Arrest of Pope to End in Trial Before Special Tribunal

Rome, July 18 (AP)—Premier Mussolini today ordered trial by a special tribunal of five newspaper editors accused of writing a pamphlet entitled "Away With the Vatican" which was offensive to the Holy See.

The defendants are Amilio Settimelli, Ottome Rosai, Bruno Rosai, Remo Viti and Alberto Maurizio.

Their pamphlet suggested that the Pope be arrested and tried before a tribunal for the defense of the state.

It is said that the Premier was particularly angry that they should have signed the pamphlet, "Faithful to the Fascist Oath," although two of the defendants have been expelled from the Fascist party.

MORGAN SAILS FOR ENGLAND

New York, July 18 (AP)—J. Pierpont Morgan's floating palace —the jet-black yacht Corsair—was speeding across the Atlantic today bound for England.

Although the financier plans to spend several months at his 16,000 acre country estate in Aldenham, Hertfordshire, his impending proximity to Paris and London gave rise to considerable speculation as to what role, if any, he will play in the international negotiations arising from the German crisis.

The Corsair slipped quietly out of Long Island Sound shortly after midnight today. On board with Mr. Morgan was his friend, John S. Lawrence, prominent Boston financier and yachtsman.

Roxbury Starts Big Week on July 27

Roxbury will inaugurate its celebration of Old Home Week with a banquet on July 27. Until Saturday, August 1, the celebration will continue with band concerts and athletic events.

A parade Saturday afternoon will end the festivities. Mayor Curley and the City Council have appropriated $1500 to aid the celebration.

THE REST OF THE NEWS

New York, July 18 (AP)—Police today swore out a murder warrant for Luigi Raffi, in the torch-death of Karl Spencer Fox, 21, Fox died last night after suffering eight days from burns.

New York, July 18 (AP)—Depositors of the closed Bank of United States wired Gov. Roosevelt today they would stage a demonstration, Aug. 15, to protest delays in reorganizing the bank.

Harry Thaw's Son Fined for Disorderly Conduct

New York, July 18—Russell W. Thaw, son of Harry K. and Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, was found guilty yesterday of disorderly conduct and was fined $10 by Justice of the Peace Jonas of Hempstead, L. I. Thaw, who is 20 and an aviator, was accused of shouting an epithet at Patrolman Turner while the latter was directing traffic July 4, at Hempstead.

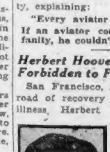
One of Thaw's character witnesses, George D. Atwood, of Washington, L. I., a stock exchange broker, admitted Thaw sometimes employed profanity, explaining:

Russell W. Thaw

"Every aviator uses profanity. If an aviator couldn't use profanity, he couldn't fly."

Herbert Hoover Jr. Forbidden to Fly

San Francisco, July 18—On the road of recovery from his recent illness, Herbert Hoover, Jr., is compelled to "keep both feet on the ground."



Herbert Hoover, Jr.

The President's son defied an airplane ride at San Francisco's Municipal Airport because, he explained, "my doctor says I mustn't fly."

HALL HOPS ON CUBAN FLIGHT

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., July 18 (AP)—James Goodwin Hall, New York stock broker and war aviator, hopped off at 8:38 a. m., Boston time, today, on a onstop flight to Havana, Cuba, in an attempt to shatter the record held by Capt. Frank Haworth of Jewelry.

Hall's Lockheed-Orion plane, The Crusader, rolled down the field for a short distance and gracefully took the air. He circled the field once and started off.

He said he would refuel on reaching Havana and start back for New York within a few minutes. His route would take him along the eastern coast line to Miami, and over Key West to Cuba.

Captain Hawks, holder of the present New York to Havana hop record, made the 1400 miles nonstop in 9 hours, 21 minutes on November 7, 1930. His return trip was made in 8 hours, 44 minutes, although, he stopped to refuel at Miami, Fla., and Charlotte, N. C.

Girl Frightens Burglar in Malden

Hearing a burglar prowling around a bedroom in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John W. McAuliffe at 87 Fellsmere rd., Malden, Miss Madeline Ross, a sister of Mrs. McAuliffe, went boldly upstairs and frightened off the intruder, who escaped by leaping from a second story window with several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry.

Miss Ross was at the McAuliffe home caring for the McAuliffe children while her sister and brother-in-law, the latter a jeweler, were out celebrating their fifth wedding anniversary.

She was sitting in the sun parlor on the first floor when she heard the burglar moving around.

FALL ON GUARD WITH SHOTGUN

El Paso, Tex., July 18 (AP)—Police were called to the home of Albert R. Fall here last night after Mrs. C. C. Chase, his daughter, had been struck by a stone which she said was thrown from the direction of a group of photographers near the Fall house.

The police said that when they arrived the former Secretary of the Interior was sitting in a chair with a shotgun across his knees.

The missile struck Mrs. Chase a glancing blow on the leg, but its force was broken by limbs of a tree and by her dress. She said she had been watering flowers. Police were unable to find the person who threw the stone.

Mrs. Tillinghast in Deportation Suit

Mrs. Anna C. M. Tillinghast, commissioner of immigration, is made defendant in a petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed by Catherine Flynn of Boston in behalf of Ng Tung Heung of China in federal court here today.

The petition alleges that Heung is about to be deported by Mrs. Tillinghast, as immigration commissioner, for being in the country illegally, when, it is claimed, he is the son of Ng Qual, an American citizen.

Bankruptcy Plea Filed

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in Federal court today by Buch Brothers, Inc., of New York and others against the A. H. Livingston & Son, Inc., of Greenfield for an alleged indebtedness of $915 for merchandise.

MOTHER FACING JAIL GETS $20

Another "Good Samaritan" has come to the aid of Mrs. Mary Gallagher, Dorchester mother of nine children, whose troubles with an ice box has brought her face to face with a jail sentence.

The new contributor, who wished her name withheld, sent a check for $20 to the Boston Evening American today, swelling the total to $25. About $70 must be raised to pay the costs of repairs to an ice chest Mrs. Gallagher purchased from a second hand store and installed in a small store opened to help her husband.

The store was swept by fire, and the ice chest damaged. Mrs. Gallagher sent the chest back and received a bill for the damages. She was summoned into the poor debtors court, but was in the hospital and was defaulted. The mortgage on her home was foreclosed. Later appearance in court, brought the total damages to nearly $70.

State Sets New Split on South Station Use

The proportionate use of the South Station by the New Haven and Boston & Albany railroads was fixed today by the Public Utilities Commission in a lengthy decision.

Heretofore the basis of payment for administration, maintenance and operation of the terminal was 72 per cent on the New Haven and 28 per cent on the Boston & Albany. The commission changed this to 70 per cent on the former and 30 per cent on the latter.

Ban on Carnivals in Cambridge Asked

The Cambridge license commission took under advisement a motion to discontinue the practice of allowing carnivals to operate in the city on the grounds that they constitute a nuisance. The commission will vote on the motion at its next meeting.

4 Lost in Landslide

Mexico City, July 18 (AP)—Rescue workers today gave up efforts to reach four men who were buried in a landslide at the Merced sand mines near here Thursday.

HELEN IN TEARS QUITS RUMANIA

Bucharest, Rumania, July 18 (AP)—Queen Helen, tearfully leaving Crown Prince Michael with King Carol, was en route to London today on what may become a trip of exile.

When she passed the royal castle at Sinaia on the Orient Express, she peered from the window in vain for a glimpse at the boy who is the only tie between her and her divorced husband. There was not even a royal salute to signify her long marital troubles were nearing a climax.

She left last night in tears—tears that were emulated by Dowager Queen Maria, her mother-in-law, and Princess Ileana, who met her in the station to bid her good-bye. Archduke Anton, Ileana's fiance, lingered in the background.

She said she would first visit her mother in London and then go to Italy with her brother, former King George of Greece, before returning to see Michael.

As she left, the royal family was making arrangements for the wedding of Ileana and Anton on July 26.

Two in Bankruptcy

Liabilities of $1191 and no assets are included in the voluntary petition of Eugene A. Margadonna, shoe worker, of Marlboro, filed in Federal court today. Arthur E. Hoeg, carpenter, of Randolph, filed a similar petition, disclosing liabilities of $2839, assets $351.

PTOMAINE POISONING STARTS CAMP DEVENS FOOD PROBE

FOOD AND MILK AT DEVENS ARE PROBED

Medical Officers Are Trying to Locate the Source of Ptomaine Poison

Camp Devens, July 18—A sweeping investigation of all food and milk in the kitchens here was begun today by Col. Frank P. Williams, commander of the 101st Medical Regiment, in an attempt to halt further cases of ptomaine poisoning.

Simultaneously, every soldier and officer in camp will be subjected to a rigid physical examination, with particular attention being paid to throats.

This examination will be made to uncover any further cases of scarlet fever or septic sore throat.

First Class Private Harold R. Frudental of Charlton a regular army man, died at Fort Banks Hospital at Winthrop yesterday, a victim of septic sore throat. He was taken to the hospital from Camp Devens two days earlier.

A third case of scarlet fever was feared when Private Leo Tromblay of Co. K, 104th Infantry, was removed to division hospital for observation.

THREE OFFICERS SICK

Three officers, who were stricken with ptomaine poisoning, were reported almost fully recovered today. They are: Lt.-Col. Wallace A. Chouinste, assistant chief of staff; Lt.-Col. Charles I. Boynton, division finance officer, and Capt. J. W. Campbell, army instructor to the 182nd Infantry.

"No cause for alarm" was the statement of Maj. Hosmer, who declared the scarlet fever cases were mild. The three quarantined companies, K, I and headquarters, of the 104th Infantry, were reported as showing no further signs of the spread of the disease.

5000 VETERANS ARRIVE

Arrivals today included 5000 veterans of the wartime Yankee Division. The veterans traveled in special busses, led by a detail of State police.

A note of sadness was found in the review of the veterans before the present division in the fact that the beloved Maj.-Gen. Clarence E. Edwards, who died last winter, was not at the head of the column.

A reunion of all classes of the training school, Massachusetts National Guard, will be held tonight at Sterling Inn, Sterling.

MUSIC LOVE LEADS WAY TO ALTAR

Ma Kennedy Seeks Annulment of Marriage to Hudson

A romance of the music world ended today at the altar of St. Mary's Catholic Church, at Roslyn, Long Island, when Miss Anna Case, concert soprano, became the bride of Clarence H. Mackay, chairman of the board of directors of the Postal Telegraph & Cable Corporation. Their romance started from a meeting at the Metropolitan Opera, where Miss Case was a star and Mr. Mackay a member of the board of directors. These pictures are the latest taken of the couple. GLAD HIS OTHER WIFE HAS SET HIGH PRICE

Husband Admits Charge of Bigamy Will Be Quite a Problem to Handle

Los Angeles, July 18 (AP)—Mrs. Minnie Kennedy-Hudson, one-time Angelus Temple leader, and the mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, today lopped off her name at the hyphen. She dropped what she had added just 20 days ago, when she became a June bride in a moonlit midnight marriage to the Rev. G. Edward Hudson in Longview, Wash.

"Im through," she said. "I have my own life to live. From now on I'm the old 'Mother' Kennedy that used to be."

Their romance shattered by a divorce action filed here yesterday by Mrs. L. Margaret Newton-Hudson and the announcement by County Prosecutor Cecil C. Hallin at Longview that he was preparing to ask for the extradition of Mr. Hudson for alleged bigamy, the bride and bridegroom became quite matter of fact.

CUTS HIGH PRICE

"I'm glad to know Mrs. Newton places a fairly high price on Mr. Hudson," said Mrs. Kennedy, commenting on the other Mrs. Hudson's petition for $200 a month temporary alimony, $3000 final alimony and $500 attorney fees.

"Needless to say, there will be no money forthcoming from me. Before our marriage Mr. Hudson voluntarily quitclaimed all rights to my real estate and properties, assuring me that it was myself only he cared for. I have filed for annulment and if the other lady considers herself his wife I'll gladly relinquish him."

Hudson, to whom Mrs. Kennedy often referred with expression "what a man!" defended himself in an interview.

SAYS MRS KENNEDY KNEW

"Mrs. Kennedy knew about me before we were married," he said. "I told her everything."

"I've been around a bit in my life. What of it? Every man has met and known women. None of these women can say they went into anything with their eyes shut."

"That's a problem," he said, referring to the proposed legal action. But there his attorney changed the subject.

Mrs. Newton-Hudson, in her divorce petition, charges him with cruelty, desertion, misconduct with another woman and with living with Mrs. Kennedy illegally. Her attorney said she would go to Longview as a witness against Mr. Hudson if he is tried there on bigamy charges.

'WHAT A MAN' MISSING; 'MA' GOES TO BED

"What-a-Man" Hudson, 20-day husband of "Ma" Kennedy, mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, and his loves are missing. Hudson, "Ma" learned to her sorrow, had too many wives, and now she is seeking an annulment. Here's "Ma" propped up in bed as she tells the story of her shattered love dream to newspapermen. (I. N. JAIL IS GUARDED IN NEGRO WAR

Dadeville, Ala., July 18 (AP)—This little seat of Tallapoosa county had the aspect of an armed camp today as result of reports that armed Negroes were on their way here to protest the holding of 17 Negroes arrested yesterday in raids to break up a meeting of members of "the Society for the Advancement of Colored People."

More than 50 heavily armed men guarded the jail and patrols were stationed on the outskirts of town.

Armed posses are combing Tallapoosa County in search of Communist organizers and members of the society that is protesting against the sentencing to death of eight Negroes in Scottsboro, Ala., for an alleged assault on two white girls.

Efforts to break up meetings of the society resulted in the killing of one Negro, the disappearance of another and the arrest of 17 and the wounding of Sheriff J. Kyle Young and Deputy Sheriff Jack Thompson. The sheriff's condition is serious. Three Negroes were wounded.

Chinese 'Love Man' Named in $50,000 Alienation Suit

Philadelphia, July 18 (AP)—Mond Pond, first Chinese ever cited here for alienation of affections, today hired a lawyer and announced himself ready to fight the $50,000 damage suit of Ling Son Ten.

And while Mond Pond and Ling Son Ten prepare for their legal conflict, Ling Chan Shee, or Mrs. Ling Son Ten, continues as cashier in Mond's restaurant.

Ling Son Ten also operates a restaurant. He is 68 and went all the way to China to marry Ling Chan Shee. He brought her back, only to have her stooge in charges. They have two children now in custody of their father.

2 GIRLS CROSS U. S. IN AUTO

For two pretty girls on their first trip away from home to motor from San Diego to Boston is somewhat of a novelty.

This is what Misses Myra and Catherine MacClemmy, 21 and 16, respectively, of South 22d st., San Diego, Cal., accomplished when they drove their sport coupe to the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Whalen, Holborn st., Roxbury.

Twelve days were consumed on the leisurely trip across the continent, the girls claiming they could have made better time, but they had been forbidden to drive at night.

Mr. G. MacClemmy, their father, gave them permission to make the trip to Boston in order that they might see the birthplace of their mother, and visit the many historical shrines in this vicinity.

Myra, clad in a camel's hair coat, stated that the only difference between Boston and her home was the stickiness that accompanied the heat here. Catherine, shyer of the two, declared that next to her home on the west coast, she prefers New England to any other part of the country.

The trouble was experienced with their automobile in the 4000-mile trip which took them to the Grand Canyon, St. Louis, Chicago, Niagara Falls to Boston.

"We had so much fun on the trip," said Myra, "that we didn't notice the days slipping by. We spent every night in hotels, having no camping equipment with us. Dad warned us against driving at night, and so we averaged about 300 miles a day. We expect to start back next Tuesday, going down through Maryland, where Dad was born, and then to Florida and Texas."

GARRETT CHECK TURNED DOWN

Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman must decide whether deputy sheriffs from the office of Dist. Atty. William J. Foley involved in the hunt for Oliver B. Garrett, former head of the liquor squad, are entitled to compensation for their service from Garrett's forfeited bail.

John A. Donovan, indictment clerk of the district attorney's office, today for the second time tendered a check for $9911.50. $100.30 less than the amount turned over to him by Garrett's bondsman, G. Acting Commissioner Arthur F. Swan for the account of Suffolk County For the second time, on advice of City Counsel Rupert S. Carven, the curtailed forfeiture was refused.

Donovan and Thomas P. McDavitt, the district attorney's secretary, announced following the second refusal that the check would not be offered again until the corporation counsel passed on the legality of the deduction for the deputies' services.

Husband Kills Self With Insect Poison

William Hanczaryck, 42, married, of Leverett st., West End, committed suicide today by drinking an insect extermination solution in his home, according to the police. Police say he had been drinking heavily and had been denied money with which to buy more liquor.

JAP CO-ED IN A LOVE TANGLE

Berkeley, Cal, July 18 (AP)—The love affair of a University of California graduate student and a Japanese girl, and the efforts of her Japanese guardian to win her for himself, have thrown the campus into a furore.

The affair came to light with announcement of the engagement of Warner Angell, 24, son of the Rev. J. W. Angell, Gold Beach, Ore., and Katsuko Suzuki, 23, orphaned art student at the university. Angell is a graduate of Wooster College, Wooster, O.

Learning of his son's intentions, the Rev. Mr. Angell protested and sought official aid of the Japanese consul. The consul said he had no intention to interfere in the love affairs of his countrymen.

In the meantime Chiyuro Endo, the guardian, admitting he wanted to marry his ward, sought to end the engagement.

N. Y. Trainmen's Pay Cut 2 Cents an Hour

New York, July 18 (AP)—Conductors and trainmen on the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Company subway, elevated and surface lines were notified today that wages would be reduced two cents an hour on Aug. 1. It was estimated this would save the company $700,000 annually.

The highest wage scale at present for a nine-hour day is $5.58 for conductors and $5.22 for trainmen.

Judge Buys Wedding License for Couple, and Ties Knot

Lynn police raiders who today descended upon an apartment in Shorey st. remained in district court to witness the wedding of a young couple they arrested.

James Hall, 24, a shoe worker, and Delia Caron, 22, arraigned in court after the raid, explained to Judge Ralph W. Reeve they had long wished to be married, but had been prevented by the scarcity of work in the shoe trades.

"We haven't the price of a marriage license," said Hall.

"Would you be married now if you had?" inquired Judge Ralph W. Reeve.

"Yes," the two young people answered in chorus.

The judge produced $2, and Hall hurried to the marriage license bureau.

He returned with a license and Judge Reeve waived the five-day law. With Officer Benjamin O'Connor and Miss Dora Landers, a court attache, as witnesses the young couple were married by Court Clerk Joseph L. Barry.

Fighting and Peace Families to Be United

London, July 18 (AP) — The grandson of a soldier of peace is engaged to the daughter of a family of fighters. John Myron Booth-Tucker, grandson of Gen. William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, is the fiance of Miss Mercy Standish-Barry, actress, whose grandfather was the late Maj.-Gen. C. B. Lucie-Smith and whose uncle was Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood.

RUDY AND FAY AT CAMP

Westbrook, Me., July 18—Rudy Vallee and his bride are at a woodland camp near Kezar Lake, where for a few days they will attempt to find some solace for the loss of the crooner's beloved mother.

There Rudy will begin work on his own memorial to his mother—a song which he plans to compose and dedicate to her. He said before leaving here for Lovell yesterday that his song would commemorate the fine attributes of his mother.

It was a broken-hearted troubadour that guided an automobile out of Westbrook. He said that he would pick up the strings of his life where he dropped them a few days ago and go back to Broadway and the avenues of the air next Monday at the latest.

Old Home Week to Open With Banquet

Old Home Week will be observed in Roxbury, beginning July 27, with a banquet in Intercolonial Hall, Dudley st., as the opening feature in the evening. A parade in which at least 20,000 persons, with floats and scenic effects, will end the celebration Saturday afternoon, Aug. 1.

During the week there will be band concerts, sports and other events at the numerous playgrounds in the district. The city, through Mayor Curley, has appropriated $1500 to help the affair to be a success financially.

ALFONSO WAITS SPAIN'S CALL

Santander, Spain, July 18 (AP)—A Spanish marquee and retired lieutenant-colonel, who refused to allow his name to be made public, has returned from a visit to former King Alfonso at Fontainbleau, France, and quoted the king as saying he would come back to Spain when justice was accorded him.

"I will not abdicate my rights to the Infante Don Juan, because that would admit an uncommitted crime," the marquee quoted Alfonso.

"I am willing to give my palace in Santander to the city on condition that it serve a social purpose.

"Those attributing to me a great fortune are mistaken, because I am suffering the economic difficulties of all political exiles. I avidly read the news concerning Spain because her problems preoccupy me as a citizen of the republic."

YOUTH SHOT IN FIGHT FOR GUN

Earl Hamilton, 17, of Mt. Vernon st., Dorchester, is under police guard in Haymarket Relief Station, suffering from a fractured collar bone, suffered when he was wounded in attempting to wrest a policeman's gun away as the officer questioned him and a companion at Summer and Washington sts., early today.

Hamilton and his friend, Fred Kennedy, 19, of Payson st., Dorchester, were seated in an allegedly stolen car when Patrolman Eugene Canney of Milk st. station approached. As the youths started the car, Patrolman Canney drew his gun and jumped on the running board. Hamilton seized the gun and in the struggle it exploded, the bullet going into his upper right arm.

He was taken to Haymarket Relief Station, while Kennedy was taken to police headquarters.

WOMAN HELD IN BABY'S DEATH

Arrested in connection with the death of Anna McKenna, 18 months old, of Newton, Mrs. Mollie K. Jaffe of New Haven, pleaded not guilty to driving to endanger in Provincetown Court today and was released on bail of $200 for hearing Aug. 22.

The accident which snuffed out the life of the baby occurred in North Truro yesterday, when Mrs. Jaffe allegedly lost control of her auto.

The baby's death brought to reality a dream of the infant's grandfather, William H. Young, president of the Seaman's Savings Bank in Provincetown, Monday night.

Young dreamed the baby, the youngest child of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest McKenna, of Centre st., Newton, was killed in an auto crash.

Miss Nellie Courtly, a nurse, had just left the baby in her carriage outside a store when the auto crashed into the store front.

Man Is Held as He Ends 6 Months' Term

As Wilton Haddow, 36, of Washington st., Brighton, stepped from Charles st. jail today after serving a six-months term for forgery, he was arrested by U. S. Deputy Marshal Joseph M. Winston. Haddow is wanted in New York, to face two other charges of forgery. He was held in bonds of $2500 pending arraignment.

Polish Army Officer Faces Death as Spy

Warsaw, Poland, July 18 (AP)—Convicted of espionage in behalf of Soviet Russia, Maj. Piotr Dembkowsky was scheduled to be executed by shooting today unless President Mosicki should extend clemency.

The major, a member of the general staff, is understood to have testified that he spied on Polish military operations because he was a Communist and sympathetic with the Soviet regime.

GIRL SAYS SHE WAS DUPE IN FORGERIES

Westland ave., Back Bay. She met the former tax collector two months ago. They were introduced by a mutual friend, and the accused forger immediately made a date with her, she said.

The girl's aliases are listed by police as Faith Burns and Doris May Hall, besides Doris La Marr.

Police say Sweetland in his schemes victimized priests, men of wealth and small business men. They charge he went to parish priests, obtained lists of the poor and sent them food baskets, paying for these with worthless checks.

"He was intellectual, debonair and his polish drew me to him. He had much an air of mystery, so different from most men, that it cast a magic spell over me," she said.

CHARITY AIDS PLOT

The girl disclosed that Sweetland asked her to make his round of calls by day because he was afraid "of being framed" and he wanted her along as a witness.

She told police she was across the street when Sweetland was arrested and she wept when they took him away.

Last night she went to the Cape and rode around all night with a boy friend in an expensive car, later going to the studio, where she was arrested, Miss Lemieux asserted.

Boston, state and Provincetown police, accompanied by private detectives descended on "The Blues," a studio occupied by Francis P. Blair, last night. He led the officers to a room where the girl was sleeping.

OTHER GIRLS AIDED

The girl had been sought in several Cape roadhouses before police went to the Provincetown studio.

Following the arrest yesterday police stated that Sweetland had been assisted by three beautiful women, who did the actual cashing of the checks. Sweetland, police said, robbed mail boxes of bank statements, bills, letters and other papers and he obtained cancelled checks and signatures. He would forge the names on blank checks, police say.

Search was started for the three women accomplices immediately after his capture late yesterday afternoon and police stated they were confident all three would be in custody today.

Inspector Walter Dillon was sent to Provincetown with private detectives following report that one woman was a guest at the cottage owned by a Boston man.

It was learned that detectives had been watching Sweetland's Peterboro st. apartment for three days. He eluded a trap yesterday afternoon and attempted to flee in his auto. The officers pursued and captured him after forcing his machine to the curb.

FAMOUS OPERA SINGER WEDS MACKAY

Richard E. Byrd after his transatlantic flight and sang the National Anthem. She also sang it at the opening of the Democratic National convention in New York city in 1924.

All of her training as a singer has been American, all in New York, and under one teacher. She took one lesson from a pupil of Mme. Augusta Ohrstrom Renard. The pupil was so impressed that she took her to Madame Renard, who became her teacher.

In 1909, an audition was arranged at the Metropolitan Opera Company. The auditions were successful, and Miss Case made her Metropolitan debut in 1910 in the role of the Dutch boy in Massenet's "Werther."

Miss Case preferred concert singing, however, and she soon began a career which averaged between 50 and 60 concerts a year and from 25,000 to 30,000 miles traveling. At the White House she sang before Presidents Taft, Harding and Coolidge.

In 1926, Clarence Mackay's daughter Ellin was married to Irving Berlin, dean of popular song writers, over the strenuous objections of her father.

After the wedding it was reported that Mackay had disinherited his daughter.

The estrangement continued through several years of the Berlins' married life, through the birth of their first child, named Mary Ellin for Mrs. Berlin's mother, and until the death of the Berlins' second child, Irving Jr., in 1928.

A reported reconciliation came with the baby's death. The capitalist visited the Berlin home in New York to extend his condolences.

Mackay's Name News to Brother of His Bride

New York, July 18 (INS)—For some time after the wedding, Peter Stanley Case, brother of Anna Case, today hadn't heard of his sister's marriage to Clarence H. Mackay.

Informed by telephone at his home in Elizabeth, N. J., he thanked the reporter, remarking he knew she was to be married but "didn't know much about it."

"By the way, what was that bridegroom's name again?" he asked just before he hung up.

JUDGE SCORES MOTHER OF 5 IN SO. BOSTON

"I have spared this woman on many occasions because of her five small children. She has consistently shown that she did not appreciate the leniency of this court, and I feel it would be useless to continue to show her mercy."

With these words Judge Day in South Boston court today sentenced Mrs. Annis Joyce of Gold st., mother of five children, to four months in the House of Correction and two fines of $50 on two liquor charges, one of abandoning her children, and one of maintaining a disorderly house. She appealed the sentence.

James Mullens, arrested with Mrs. Joyce in a spectacular raid a month ago, was given two months for larceny of a suit of clothing from another man present in the house at the time of the raid, and two months for idle and disorderly conduct.

According to South Boston police, Mrs. Joyce was seized in the raid after she had leaped from a second story window of her home and grappled with policemen who attempted to pull her from a wall she was climbing.

Mrs. Joyce, police said, fled and abandoned her children rather than face the charges pending against her. Her children were placed in charge of the S. P. C. C.

AUTOS DETOUR IN BRIDGE WAR

Denison, Tex., July 18 (AP)—A dusty detour, an absent judge and a tractor were the principal factors of interest in a "war of the bridges" today along the Red river front separating Oklahoma and Texas.

Hundreds of travelers used a detour via Preston and Madill over a free bridge there while the question of whether a free bridge newly built or a toll bridge should be used between this city and Durant, Okla., remained unanswered.

Of the latter structures the toll brigs was open on the Texas side but blockaded by the tractor on the Oklahoma; the free bridge was open at the Oklahoma end, but barricaded and guarded by Texas rangers on this side of the river.

England Would Let Daylight Into Its Beer-Drinking

London (AP)—The Englishman, like his German neighbor, soon may be able to get beer, or even stronger drink, beneath the trees of public parks.

With the motto, "I want to let daylight into the bar parlor," George Lansbury, first commissioner of works, is giving consideration to granting of liquor licenses to park concessions.

Mr. Lansbury is a teetotaller and intends remaining so.

"If other people will drink," he says, "then I hope that they will do so in decent surroundings. I think the modern pub where people stand at the bar and drink for hours on end, even if they drink only a little, is very demoralizing. I want to let the pure daylight into the bar parlor."

BOY IS STABBED AIDING MOTHER

While Guy Pierce, 20, of Little's lane, Peabody, was dying today in the Thomas Hospital as a result of being stabbed below the heart while objecting to attentions being paid his mother, Thomas Rosley, 50, of Lynde st., Salem, was being held in Peabody court on two charges of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Rosley pleaded not guilty to the charges, one involving Pierce, and the other for assault on Ralph Maguire, 22, of Leavitt ct., Salem, who was in the Pierce home at the time. Hearing was set for July 24.

TAKEN AT GUN POINT

The alleged assailant was captured at gun point by Peabody police in front of his home after the stabbing.

According to police, the boy came home late last night and found Rosly and Maguire with his widowed mother, Mrs. Flossie Pierce. The youth remonstrated with Rosly, telling him his attentions were causing considerable comment in the town and objecting to his presence in the house.

ORDERED TO LEAVE

The boy finally ordered Rosly to leave the house and to cease his attentions to his mother. Rosly is then alleged to have gone to the kitchen and secured a carving knife with which he attacked the boy.

The youth was badly cut about the head and face and received a deep wound under the heart which may cause his death. Maguire finally succeeded in stopping the attack after being slashed himself.

The boy was rushed to the hospital where his name was placed on the danger list. No hope was held out for his recovery by hospital authorities.

Kansas Birdman to Alight Here Today

Completing his 810th daily flight, Dr. John D. Brock, wealthy Kansas City sportsman pilot, will visit Boston today on his record-breaking hop that is carrying him to all the State capitals throughout the country.

Dr. Brock, who is travelling with Colonel Ruby D. Garrett, general counsel for the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, will bring greetings to Governor Ely from the Governors of Missouri and Kansas and from the president of the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce.

Daughter Gets Bulk of Fraser Estate

The will of Dr. John C. Fraser, medical examiner for the Weymouth district of Norfolk county, filed with the Registrar of Probate at Dedham today, bequeaths his entire estate amounting to $35,000 to his five children and a grandchild.

Four of his children received $1000 each. They are, Mrs. Mary S. Whelan, Mrs. Irene F. Bates, Archibald Fraser and Somers Fraser. The two latter also receive their father's medical library and instruments. John C. Fraser, a grandson, receiver $2000. The residue of the estate is bequeathed to Katherine E. Fraser, a daughter.

WORLD FLIERS START TODAY

New York, July 18 (AP)—Hugh Herndon, Jr., and Clyde Pangborn hope to make another start this afternoon or tonight on a flight around the world. They were unperturbed by their narrow escape in an attempt to take off yesterday.

Herendon was married on June 14 to Miss Mary Ellen Farley of Albany, N. Y., who was at Roosevelt Field yesterday to see him off. She was introduced to most persons as his fiancee.

Their route has been revised to take them from New York to Harbor Grace, N. F., thence to either Croydon, Eng., Berlin or Moscow. They hope to circle the globe in four or five stops. They expect the dual controls and long cruising range of their plane will enable them to beat the record of the Winnie Mae. Post and Gatty's plane.

FOUND LOVE IN CLOUDS

Miss Olivia "Keet" Matthews, Boston aviatrix, is to be married to Ralph S. Maughan, traffic manager of the American Airways. The engagement of Miss Matthews was announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Matthews, today. (Staff photo.)

BOSTON GIRL FLIER TO WED

The engagement of Olivia ("Keet") Matthews, Boston aviatrix, to Ralph S. Maughan, Jr., traffic manager of the Colonial Division of the American Airways, was announced by the flier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Matthews of Dedham, today.

The engagement follows a romance of seven months which had its beginning at the East Boston Airport, where both are connected in their professional fields.

Miss Matthews, who has been a licensed pilot since 1929, was the first flier to make a solo flight from the airport in a ski-equipped plane. She is secretary and treasurer of the Women's Wing and Prop Club and a member of the Betsy Ross Corps, national flying organization. She made her debut in Boston society in 1928.

Mr. Maughan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph M. Maughan of Mt. Alban st., Cambridge. He has been connected with the American Airways for three years. The marriage will take place at St. Paul's Church, Dedham, about Oct. 1.

South Boston Youth Fined $15 at Quincy

Because he did not appeal a six months sentence imposed on him in Quincy court today, John Peluso, 20, of South Boston, escaped with a suspension of the sentence for carrying a "billy." He paid a $15 fine for operating a car without a license.

According to police, Peluso and five others were discovered throwing stones at a house on the shores of Houghton's Pond, yesterday. In their car a blackjack was found.

By the Yard

The happiness and well-being of those who work with hand or brain in the textile industry can be measured by the yards of cloth consumed by the public.

Stylists who design the popular weaves, salesmen who distribute the goods, management and personnel who cooperate to eliminate needless waste and loss in production—all contribute their share to maintain the gainful employment that is so essential to the welfare of the workers and the communities in which they live.

PRESIDENT'S PRIVACY; ATHLETES' STATUES

—By Gilbert Seldes—

ALTHOUGH I READ the newspapers with devotion and care, I haven't been at all conscious of Washington items which might be offensive to the President. Mr. Hoover has, in fact, been enjoying the rare experience of almost universal praise during the past few weeks, and his public and official life has been of such interest that private items were generally neglected. Yet at the end of this period an announcement is made that hereafter news of the White House will come from official sources and, at the same time, that Secret Service men are tracing a "leak" in the news.

• • •

Domestic Details

It appears that more than a dozen stories have been found unplatable and among these, according to a good guesser, the reports of a patch on a White House curtain, of a Presidential dog biting a visitor, of a woman falling into the Rapidan, of a servant sent to stop the noise of carpenters, and of a particularly rapid drive from the summer camp to the White House. On the surface, none of these stories is seriously annoying.

A few weeks ago I uttered the heretical opinion that the President's "coldness" was more attractive than the efforts of publicity men and political advisers to make him warm, to humanize him with little friendly gestures and anecdotes. Apparently Mr. Hoover is of the same opinion. As a practical politician he must know that a patch on a curtain will endear him to a million voters more sweetly and faithfully than patching up the German financial fabric. But he will not have it. He will be a President and not just folks. He has never shown any contempt for human beings, although he seems to prefer them far away. As President, however, he has been a cold man; even his rescue of Germany was coldly offered. And the saving grace of this coldness is that Mr. Hoover will not allow himself to be made hearty and chummy by his press-agents. He may lose an election, but he will save his aloofness. Even if we wonder what makes him so afraid of appearing human, there is something admirable in his stubborn refusal.

"Always Belittlin'"

A Russian critic explains the official reception of Post and Gatty as an effort of bourgeois politicians "to capitalize the airmen's achievement to boost the morale of the dispirited American people and direct their minds from the hardships of the economic crisis." The New Republic, not always so sympathetic to the psychology of the Soviets, somewhat hastily declares that the scientific results of the Post-Gatty flight "may be virtually nil" (apparently unaware of the navigational problems Gatty solved) and repeats a familiar criticism of America and the modern world: "To excel nowadays in sport, exploration or physical adventure is at once to capture the world's imagination." The radio, the newspapers, and the movies, say the editors, "stop at nothing to produce new wonders or monstrosities for the hero-worshipping multitude." The silliness of certain efforts to break records is apparent; but the notion that the worship of outstanding athletes is a modern fault needs to be decisively slapped down.

• • •

The Greek Way

Let the slap be delivered by one who never heard of our reception to Lindbergh, our acceptance of Tilden and Dempsey as actors, our eager pursuit of Tunney as he wandered from the prizering to the villa of Bernard Shaw. In his fascinating "Martyrdom of Man," written 60 years ago, Winwood Reade says this of the Olympic Games of Ancient Greece:

> "The man who won the olive garland on that celebrated course was famous forever afterwards. His statue was erected in the public hall at Delphi; he was received by his native city with all the honors of a formal triumph; he was not allowed to enter by the gates; a part of the city wall was beaten down. The city itself became, during five years, the talk of Greece, and wherever he travelled, they were welcomed, with congratulations and esteem."

Where is our statue to Charlie Paddock? Who are Lindbergh's neighbors? Who remembers the names of our Olympic winners? Except for those who got in trouble, or into the movies, what football heroes are remembered? Name three outfielders who played behind Rube Waddell. The neglect of our athletes is really shocking!

House Kitten

My kitten leads a quiet life,
Upon a cushioned chair;
And when he looks for liver,
The liver's always there.

My kitten knows no anguish,
There's always peace and rest
And always pats a-plenty
From those that he likes best!

And yet I sometimes wonder,
Though he may preen and purr,
If there's a rebel pulse that beat
Beneath his shining fur?

If, when the nights are starry,
And shadow shapes creep near,
He loathes a sleek existence
That holds no hint of fear . . .

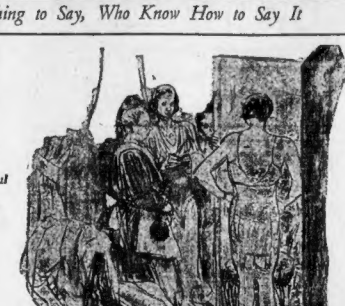
Other Men's Ideas

From "The Martyrdom of Man" (first published in 1872), by Winwood Reade; Dutton:

"America is in reality more of a monarchy than England . . . The king of America has more to give away than any king of Great Britain since Charles II. . . . He has the power to discharge, of his own pleasure and mere notion, every ambassador, every consul, every employe . . . and to fill their places with his own friends.

"In America the opinion of the public can with difficulty act upon the Government. Practices occur in the House of Representatives which have been unknown in England since the days of Walpole. If the prosperity of a country depended on its government, America would be less prosperous than England. In fact, America is the happiest country in the world."



"Madame has a beautiful figure—but it's an expensive one."

Pretty Men

—By Diana Bourbon—

THE OTHER DAY a young man who has been to too many movies asked me why women set so much store by handsome men. The answer, of course, is that they don't. (Look at the ones they marry!) Except in fiction, the handsome man exited long ago. An ugly man with a personality has far more chance of becoming a Don Juan —be he so minded—than the most glorious Apollo ever born of woman.

The handsome heart-wrecker is pretty much of a romancer's myth, anyway. It is always ugly men who do the worst damage. The most attractive man I, personally, ever met looked like a fruity medieval portrait. But he had a magnificent head.

• • •

To begin with, fascination is, to women, at all times more important than looks. And the Beauty is inclined to rely too much on what his looking-glass tells him. He's complacent, conceited, with often a hint of lacking virility.

Ever notice how often women describe some man as being tremendously handsome, and men —on meeting him— are surprised to find he is nothing of the kind? That's because they look for classic perfection of feature, while women are apt to find a man "handsome" if he possesses those entirely different attributes they best appreciate — strength, initiative, consideration and poise. It was a far sounder knowledge of feminine psychology that created the strong, rugged hero of the old "Western" than that the ancient Greeks displayed when they allotted all the more exciting love affairs to the best looking among the gods.

After all, women are first and foremost practical creatures, and a handsome face doesn't earn a good living—though its possessor sometimes may, in spite of it. A handsome face is not necessarily delightful, or easy to live with—though a kind, whimsical, humorously face is. A handsome face doesn't always mean a well-decorated mind—but alert, intelligent eyes, maybe accompanied by a crooked mouth, do!

• • •

And what about the things a handsome face—inevitably—does mean? That tiresome little dash of vanity, for the least excusable of all lookers—for no male has been, yet, responsible for his own good looks! The revolting tendency of the emotionally ill-balanced is to hero-worship of the face for its own sake. The chance—nowadays—that its owner may at any time break into stardom in the movies . . . and then good-bye happiness. Beauties, of course, least of all can tolerate good-looking men. A rival among one's own admirers is too bitter a pill to swallow!

No! The only men I know who, collectively, demand "character" first and foremost in a woman's face, with "looks" a bad second, are the Russians, but I have never yet met the woman worth knowing, worth talking to for five minutes, who could even put up with a man whose face hasn't got "character" (even if it was bad character) stamped all over it. And beauty leaves so little room for character, if only because, when it has acquired some, it usually ceases to be beauty.

As I said . . . Keep your handsome heroes for all means, mister. But give me fascination!

Respite

How soothing at the close of day
When restful night draws near
To cast the cares of toil away
And hasten home to hear
The silver voice that floats to me
From far-off Station XYZ
Advising me to go and see
My dentist twice a year.

They Call It Fun

—By Agnes Smith—

IT IS PART OF THE CUSSEDNESS and the lovableness of the human race that men and women, not finding troubles and difficulties enough in the ordinary routine of life, employ their leisure moments in the pursuit of exasperating and nerve-wracking pleasures.

And the harder and more competitive a man's work, the harder and more competitive will be his play.

The popularity of golf is a classic example. Not one person in a thousand plays a really good game of golf. Yet the links are crowded every week-end with men and women hoping for an impossible perfection.

They will tell you that they don't play well, that they do not really try to play well, that they just dub around for the exercise and recreation. But they are merely laughing to conceal a broken heart.

• • •

Tennis and Stamps

Even more unhappy are the tennis players because a poor game of tennis is even more unendurable than a poor game of golf. Being a faster game, the humiliations are constant. A bad golf player is only pitiful; a bad tennis player is downright ridiculous—nothing less than a clown.

The more obscure hobbies are still more painful. A man I know who works very hard spends his few leisure moments collecting stamps. On the face of it, this would seem to be a sedative pleasure. But it apparently doesn't work out that way.

The man always appears to be suffering from an acute malaise. Every mail brings him fresh irritations in the form of tantalizing and incomprehensible literature.

And, too, this hobby has fallen into the clutches of a stamp dealer, a swarthy Oriental gentleman who looks as unconvincing as a crystal gazer.

The collector's wife views the dealer with suspicion and alarm; she declares that he is not on the up-and-up. The dealer, on his part, regards the wife as his arch-enemy. He slinks in and out of the house, quite aware that his visits result in scenes.

• • •

Raising Pheasants

The rewards of the stamp collector are virtually nil. He has the pleasure of showing his collection to dinner guests who, after a faint display of interest, suddenly remember that they have appointments at nine o'clock in the morning, and will it be rude if they leave early?

Another useless and demoralizing hobby is raising fancy birds—golden pheasants, let us say. If you raise one pheasant from a hatching of 24 eggs you are a wizard. In infancy, little pheasants eat African ant eggs, which gives you a rough idea of what you are up against. A baby pheasant has less sense than a chick, which is the depth of imbecility. Furthermore you wait two years for the bird to get its full plumage.

Then you enter your masterpiece at the County fair and receive a blue ribbon, which you exhibit to friends who accept it as conclusive proof that you are off your nut.

• • •

Horrors of Bridge

Bridge, which used to be a social pastime, now has become a raging chaos. No two persons play according to the same rules.

A few casual telephone calls, these warlike days, will not assemble a bridge table. You must scour the city to find four persons who play the same game.

Croquet is a fairly safe hobby unless an expert croquet player happens to get into the tournament. There is no more arrogant snob in the world than a good croquet player. In competition with the ordinary lawn duffer, he is vicious, derisive and insulting. He sulks and sneers in face of your ineptitude and often hurls his mallet on the ground in an unsportsmanlike gust of temper.

• • •

The Fickle Rose

Growing roses is another hobby guaranteed to ruin your summer—and your winter, too, if you have a hothouse. The old garden motto, Je ne sais pas la rose, mais j'ai vecu avec elle,' is quite true.

If you want roses—and I mean roses that are true to color, strong of stem and well shaped—you must live with them. Once you turn your back, your roses will come down with every disease in the gardener's guide.

Men with great wealth and rare dispositions go in for raising pure bred cows. They thirst for the insane delight of drinking milk that costs them one dollar a quart to produce, milk that is too expensive to sell.

You will find one such delightful rich lunatic in every county and all the farmers in his community spend their winter evenings discussing the magnificence of his barns and the foolishness of his economic policies.

Dispossessed

I've been dispossessed; but I'm happy, I vow.
I'm safer than ever before.
The wolf at the door cannot bother me now,
Because I have not any door!

RADIO CHRISTENING

NBC and CBS Arrange Airship Launching

Giant Dirigible Akron Ceremonies Aired Next Month

Perhaps the first christening ever to be radioed is now definitely arranged. Strangely enough, it will be an air christening in every respect. A giant is to be named on August 8, with Mrs. Herbert Hoover doing the necessary honors. This being a land of little spirit lately, (liquid) no bottles of exhilarating bubbly beverage will be used when The Akron, world's largest lighter than air vessel, actually becomes The Akron. Mrs. Hoover is going to release a number of beautifully feathered pigeons from a platform especially construcetd in front of the huge dirigible.

Microphone men will be on hand aplenty. Both NBC and CBS have arranged to carry the proceedings over a national network. Ear cuppers will hear prominent speakers from various walks of life, among whom will be Secretary of the Navy Adams and Rear-Admiral Moffatt.

In addition to the speeches, an announcer, dispatched from New York headquarters of the broadcasters, will make a tour of the giant airship and tell the world exactly what he sees. It may even be McNamee or Husing, although assignments are in no way definite at this writing. It will be a sort of two-act radio event, with a matinee and evening performance. Remember, August 8 is the date.

• • •

Little is known to the public about the high cost of broadcasting—a major item of which is the considerable sums spent for rental of telephone lines that make hook-ups possible. CBS is planning an experiment designed to do away with wire links, substituting short wave transmitters. Four such transmitters are in construction, with little money appropriated for tests to be made in an effort to determine whether or not the idea is technically possible and satisfactory to listeners. More about this later.

• • •

Broadway folk are tittering over word that Walter Winchell had an audition for a perfume concern, the broadcast to include Ruth Etting. Now, who's the sissy?

• • •

NBC was paid a visit by "Pa" Stribling this week, the elder Georgian dropping in casually to pick up a check from the big broadcasting outfit to cover his boy's cut for radio rights of his fight effort against "Maxie" Schmeling. Sort of gravy on the potatoes—eh?

On the Air

From out of Forest Hills comes vital proof that the Ghoem Chatter are wrong; Schultz is not dead. In fact he is so alive that WNAC just signed him as staff organist. Stanley is the first name, local boy, age 29, one of the youngest in the business. And what's more Schults can sing as well as organize . . . Contrary to current reports, WCSH, Portland, and the new Manchester, N. H., station probably will not join the Yankee network. At least not for a while. Little things like contracts and the Federal Radio Commission cavaloning may hold up action. Still another Boston boy makes good. John Holbrook, who graduated from WNAC and WBZ to NBC, will take Henry M. Neely's place as Old Stager on the Wed. A'EEI Pyram, starting July 29 . . . John Charles Thomas, noted baritone, will do a NBC 8 week series starting July 30, locally WBZ . . . What sounds like rhetorical excerpts from the fourth grade, but which is really quite he-man-ish is the new NBC series, termed "Hobbies," to start next month . . . Episodes in the career of Earl Sande, with the jockey in the leading role, will be given in two chapters on the NBC starting Tuesday.

Polo takes the air tomorrow, WNAC at 5, when Ted Husing describes a match at the Sand Point Club, Port Washington, L. I. . . . A steam calliope, consisting of three conrines and a 10-cent flute, and manned by four husky lungs of the "Girl Crazy" quartet, brighten up by WNAC at 3:15 entering this eve . . . WLOE seems to be a feeding ground for WNAC. The latest gentleman of the Summer, reported to be a futura WNAC announcer, is Paul Welch . . . Mention of astrologers will bring letters to the countenances of members of the Radio Commission. And because Norman Prescott, astrologer now star gazing at the "Met," wouldn't have the commission's scowl he will tell about his astrology experiences on WBZ Monday, 6 m., rather than air his predictions . . . George Gershwin has been added to the CBS initial television p'gram Tuesday . . . Ninety per cent of CBS's sport events b'casts were heard through short wave. And short waving is expensive, too . . . New WBZ studios at the Bradford include, among other things, a unit hitherto unknown in N. E. radio—a laboratory kitchen. M. G. M.

—THEN YOU CAN MAKE YOUR CHARACTERS PERFORM HUMANLY.
MORRIS

Milton Morris, versatile Evening American cartoonist, tells Evening American Art Course students today about the thing in cartoons that makes them "click." That's human nature, an all-important quality.

You have to have more than drawing ability to be a comic artist. You have to have clever fingers—yes, but you have to have something else, too.

Today Milton Morris, clever Boston Evening American cartoonist, tells you what it is.

By MILTON MORRIS

You must have learned a lot about what you can do with paper, pen, and ink by now. You've had some good teachers to tell you how they get the effects you admire so much in their work, how they make their characters, express surprise, fright, pride, and so forth.

Today I'm going to talk about every cartoonist's specialty—a specialty that you don't notice in their work, but whose lack you would notice in an instant if it wasn't there.

IT is HUMAN NATURE.

It's necessary to know how to show all the human emotions in your characters—your drawings would be valueless if you couldn't do it. But it's almost as important entirely and equally necessary to know what emotions to show, what dramatic contrasts to bring in, and what effects you can get with them.

A cartoon must be true to the people it represents.

And, to make it so, you must know the people you're drawing. And the only way to know them is to study them.

SUBWAY SKETCHES

I often take a piece of paper and a pencil out of my pocket when I'm sitting in the subway and hastily catch a line here or a face there that will give me an idea. Some people might be surprised to know that their faces had served as inspiration in this way for a cartoon on the pages of the Evening American. Of course, I don't try to make my drawings look like the originals—in fact, I am careful to draw them so that their own mothers couldn't recognize them, but they are the foundations.

The night of a fat man running for a train, then a tall, thin man doing the same thing is worth preserving. Some day I may need to draw a comic character doing that very thing—into every life a little train running must fall—then all I have to do is look in my scrap book, and I have the very thing.

NO LIFE DRAWING

A cartoonist can't draw from life. He has to sit down at a drawing board and face a blank sheet of white paper. He hasn't any models, except those he carries in his scrap book and his memory.

And after awhile you get so you take in those details and store them away in your mind without thinking about it. And then when you want an idea, you have only to look around and face a blank sheet of white paper. He hasn't any models, except those he carries in his scrap book and his memory.

And after awhile you get so you take in those details and store them away in your mind without thinking about it. And then when you want an idea, you have only to look around and face a blank sheet of white paper. He hasn't any models, except those he carries in his scrap book and his memory.

One more thing while we're still on this subject.

Read the newspapers. Keep abreast of the times.

Drawn slang, when they use slang, must use the newest slang.

You must not have them old-fashioned in any way.

And if you choose to burlesque some new event, choose something that is new. Don't look back week, or two weeks ago, but just yesterday, or even today, if you can.

TODAY—that's the big word nowadays.

Milton Morris will continue on Monday summarizing the comic art lessons you've had and giving you more tips on what comes after you learn how to do the pen and ink part of it. Don't miss Monday's lesson.

THE RACES OF THE EASTERN YACHT CLUB STIRRED things up a bit at Dark Harbor this week, several dinners and dancing parties being given for the officers of the fleet. While

POLLY PROCTOR

B. Devereux Barker—one of the gay skippers of the Eastern cruise—is breezing about in his Flythe—no, not Nythe—Mrs. B. Devereux, his petite and charming wife—who was one of THE Shepards of Tuxedo Park, N. Y.—is visiting the A. Wentworth Ericsons of Maggie Island—at least that is what it sounds like—which is a remote spot way out in the bay, so isolated that one has to have one's own private yacht—the Ericsons have three—to go back and forth to the mainland which is Port Clyde, Me.

* * *

The Ericsons are a most interesting family. A. Wentworth himself is a prof at Technology and a great nature and sea lover. He was a familiar figure around Beacon Hill two winters ago, but for the past season has been at Grey House, Swampscott. Mrs. Ericson, whose snowy hair is indeed a crowning glory, resembles a full blown rose in her baby pink creations always draped with a spray of blush roses. Her friends are enthusiastic about her and the Ericsons' hospitality is much prized. At Maggie Island the only rule is that the guests arise at the screech of dawn to partake of breakfast at six—there is always something in every rose garden to prick one.

Josiah Ericson on Winning Varsity Crew

JOSIAH ERICSON ROWED ON THE WINNING VARSITY crew at Harvard this year—the swell crew that nosed out Yale on the Thames. There are two other sons and while we are mentioning Tech, we would like to ask the debs why they don't use that brainy bunch from whom to pick their ushers and escorts this winter. We scarcely ever hear of the Tech boys—men, pardon us—and what a good time they can give a girl when they come out and land real jobs. We have never heard yet of a Tech man posing as a parent's pet.

WE ARE WONDERING when the engagement of Edith Wolcott and Charlie Devens will be announced.

Edith Wolcott

Edith was elected secretary of the infants' hospital committee for this year—that ritzy committee that sponsors the Professional Players' nights at the Plymouth once a month for the benefit of the hospital—and the big news was expected soon after but Charles had a slight mixup over his exams at Harvard and perhaps they decided to wait until he gets reinstated, which will not be until February. They are both young enough to wait anyway.

HERE'S A PART ONE. TWO sweet young things who came out last winter are going to study at Radcliffe this winter for the diplomatic service. Now I ask you, can you visualize merry little Polly Proctor majoring in diplomacy? Elizabeth Mercer, who sort of came out a year ago, and then decided to go West and do big things, entering Wisconsin University—which is co-ed by the way—has also been infected by this international stuff and is now representing something somewhere as delegate to an international conference, mock or otherwise. This will all be fine until somebody drags a "red" herring across their trail and then we can just see them madly majoring in matrimony.

POOR JANE—THE CONSENSUS of opinion is that she is what you might term a poor loser—if that is the way you look at it. We see by the funny papers that Mrs. Guy Murchie, that was, has called for bread to question all the chambermaids and bellboys, and her friends—quite a few for that—think she is off on a big spree because Guy put one over on her at Reno. Oh, well, they are getting so wrought up about it that they are almost ready to put up a subscription by all the tabbies prohibiting her entry into the exclusive circles when she returns. She can count them and stay over there—Ha. Ha.

* * *

WE HEAR THAT A GROUP of this year's pretty girls are going to have a subscription dance which will include a number of this coming season's buds on the committee. It will be held on the North Shore—Del Monte's, we imagine—and the date is September 11. Anne Warren, who has recently sailed for Europe, will be in charge of arrangements and her sister, Helen, will take over details until she returns. Other members of the committee are Serita Bartlett, Anne Dick, Alice Ellsworth, Sally White, Cecily Livermore, Rachael Warner, Katherine Davis, Madelyn Phillips, Marian Clarke and Harriet Moseley. We can recall a perfectly lovely party given there last season by a similar group which was one of the early times given during the entire season. It may be our imagination, but this bunch of buds is not as beautiful as some we have seen.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

Wotta head! . . . And it's all Bob Finn's fault . . . If he hadn't been such a genial host I would have greeted the new day with a song in myp heart instead of a gong in my heart instead of a gong in it, it was worth it—gong and everything—when I look back on the event of the day . . . And the evening.

First of all, there was that dandy swim—my first of the year—with that tingling sensation that the first dip into the surf gives you . . . Then, dawdling around on the beach, sifting sand through your fingers and feeling the warmth of the sun as it beats down on you . . . Later, a shower and a rub down and I suddenly discovered that I had developed a ravenous appetite.

Too, I discovered that the salt water had parched my throat . . . That's where Bob came into the picture . . . He must have seen that gleam in my eyes and sensed just what I needed for its was forthcoming with magical swiftness . . . After that life took on a rosente hue . . . The music was inspired . . . The dinner was the best ever and I can't remember when I have enjoyed dancing so much . . . So, when you take everything into consideration, what does it matter that the gong boomed with monotonous regularity today? . . . Only I'm warning you here and now, that from where I'm sitting today's column doesn't look so hot.

* * *

CHIT-CHAT

Had you heard that Charlie Winston, general manager for RKO, here until his recent illness, has been transferred to Cleveland to take charge of three RKO theaters in that city? . . . Or that the roof garden at the Ritz Carlton will open soon—and then—or I had expected? . . . George Bancroft—in person—is coming to Boston Sunday with directors, cameramen, gag men et. al., to shoot some scenes for a forthcoming picture of his . . . Incidentally Guy Robinson, diminutive, handsome operetta baritone, is the closest pal of the big, brawny, dyed-in-the-wool-Bancroft.

ALWAYS BELITTLIN'

There's some mistake somewhere . . . In Odd McIntyre's column, which was entitled "AT SEA," June 16," Mr. M. reports that he was invited to dine at the captain's table during a cruise along with Mrs. Hay Long, Mrs. Conde Nast, Gloria Swanson, Edna Ferber and several other luminaries . . . Under a date line of July 15, the Associated Press carried a story from Cannes, France, on the wedding of Grace Moore, the opera star, and said that "among the distinguished guests at the wedding were Charlie Chaplin, GLORIA SWANSON (the Caps are our own), Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt, etc." . . . Now me, I . . . Did Gloria fly from Cannes to the boat, just for the dinner or does Odd want us to take him literally when he date-lines his column "AT SEA?"

"ANGELA MIA"

The other day—Monday, if you insist that we be exact—we spoke about "Angela Mia," the theme song of "Street Angel" . . . An anonymous correspondent has written in to tell us that this particular ballad was written for and dedicated to a popular Quincy girl who has since died—which is an interesting, if not momentous, addition to our store of knowledge.

Dear Al:

I wish you would do something for me. At the Crosscup-Pleben grunts Tuesday night a jovial gent pressed upon me a clean handkerchief in a box at Braves Field, much to the frowns of Ruth Moran, secretary to Hap Myers; her very pretty (you'd be surprised) sister; Gert Lamothe, who is the "Mrs" with Hap in the "Mr. and Mrs." broadcast, and another pretty lady who, strangely enough, is Mrs. Whelton. He wouldn't give me his name and address—if he knew it—But I would like to get in touch with him because the handkerchief now is soiled and I want him to have it laundered.

And, incidentally—what do you think of a girl who frogged it home from an automobile ride, and came back skipping?

Paul (Fresh Air) Whelton

P. S. If, you're breaking my heart! Don't you think life is tough enough today without asking me to try and untangle that letter of yours? If it's a handkerchief you want, look in the lower left hand drawer of my desk, but don't —please—ask us to make any intelligent answer to you.

City Officials Will Fete Honeymooners

Stanton Reid White and his wife (Sally Paula Curley), niece of Mayor Curley, will be given a welcome home party on their arrival from their honeymoon this evening by many of their City Hall friends at the Hotel Edward, Rockport, where they will be the guests of Miss Rae Chisholm, a school chum of the bride's.

KEEN TENNIS ENTHUSIASTS

MISS BOHLEN MRS. COOLIDGE

MISS EDITH BOHLEN and Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge are summering on the North Shore. They are interested spectators at the tennis matches at the Essex Country Club.

Mrs. George to Give Lectures

Everyone seems to be interested this summer in getting in as many lectures as possible on all sorts and sundry subjects, such as "Russia," one that enthralls almost all of us and "World Conditions and Current Events."

Mrs. Andrew J. George is one of the most popular of these summer season speakers, and has already begun her fourth season of two different series of lectures, one on Tuesdays and the other on Wednesdays, at the Congregational Church in Wenham, and the Hotel Rockmere, Marblehead, respectively.

But next Thursday she will speak at a special meeting under the auspices of the National Civic Federation, Brockton branch, at the home of Mrs. Frederick W. Filoon, "Robinwood," Buzzards Bay, at which there is expected to be a large gathering.

Sales of Articles Made by Veterans

There have already been two, and there will be five more sales of articles made by the ex-service men, on July 21 and 22, at the home of Mrs. William Penn Creason, in Stockbridge; on the 25th at the Hawthorne Inn, East Gloucester; the 28th at the home of Mrs. J. Bertram Williams, Annisquam; the 29th, at the home of Miss Margaret L. Corliss, Fuller st., Magnolia, and Thursday, the 30th, at the Hotel Moorland, Bass Rocks.

This gives everyone all over the shore a chance to patronize this movement, and help "the Boys."

Benefit to Aid Hospital Fund

"Simoon," a three-act play by H. R. Lenormand, will be presented at the Oceanside Hotel, Magnolia, on August 27, by a group of professionals, for the benefit of the North Shore Babies Hospital, Mrs. Charles F. Ropes, chairman of the committee, having enlisted their help in raising money for this institution.

The hospital, which is in Salem, has been considerably improved since last year, with a new terrace added on to the piazza, a very much altered and attractive driveway, and flowers planted about the lawn.

Among those assisting Mrs. Ropes in organizing and patronizing this theater venture are Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., president of the board of managers; Mrs. Edward F. McNichol, secretary; Miss Silvia P. Benson, Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, Miss Isabella Cammann, Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Jr., Mrs. Albert M. Creighton, Mrs. Samuel S. Crocker, Jr., and Mrs. Evans R. Dick. Mrs. Ropes is also the first vice-president of the board.

The new $2000 wading pool on Grove st., Waltham, has been opened to the children of the city.

DAILY TRUE STORY

HEART OF GOLD

A GUARD WATCHED HIM, HAND ON GUN

PRETTY LITTLE Lora Martin was delighted when her roommate, Doris Lawson, invited her to spend a month at the seashore. The only thing was that Lora's father had expected her to spend a week during that time with him. But he would understand, even though business had kept him from seeing Lora almost all Summer.

He knew that poor Lora enjoyed getting into a real home when she could, since she had none of her own. Most of her holidays were spent at the stuffy girls' school, with an occasional week-end at her father's hotel suite in New York.

Doris brushed away her roommate's qualms. "You couldn't have seen you father for long. Ko goes away so much, and you know how much you hate being at that city hotel in summer. Besides, this is the only time Chuck can be with us and he—well, it's no secret even to the folks now that he loves you."

Lora blushed, her dark eyes sparkling, her olive cheeks suffused with color. "I love him too," she said. "I told Daddy about us, and he is anxious to meet Chuck. Perhaps Chuck and I could run down to the city together and see Daddy and then come back."

Plan Fails
She Couldn't Reach Father

But somehow this plan didn't work. Manuel Martin wrote that he was busy each time they decided to go to town. And then for more than two weeks, Lora couldn't reach her father. Her letters were returned unopened from this hotel. She realized suddenly that there was no one to turn to if anything happened to him. She had no other relative than this kind over-indulgent father who had sent her always to the best schools, given her the best clothes, everything that money could buy. He had bestowed all his love on his beautiful little daughter, opened his confidence to her.

And yet there was a curious boundary to his confidence. When she asked about her mother, he grew suddenly silent. He told her she had no other relative than himself, no brothers and sisters, cousins, or aunts. When she lamented that they had no proper home, but that she was always at school, he always at different hotels, he reminded her that his business, that of importer, that he led a nomadic life.

"I'm worried about Dad," Lora said to Chuck one evening as they sat watching the waves break monotonously on the shore. "He's so alone, and he's getting old. If something should happen to him, it would be terrible. He'd have no one near to care for him."

"We'll go hunt for him," Chuck said. "I want to tell him anyway what a wonderful daughter he has, and ponder the family's invitation for him to come and meet them. We'll go together tomorrow."

They inquired at the Clarkson Hotel in New York and the clerk looked at them knowingly as he denied all knowledge of Mr. Martin's whereabouts. He did finally suggest an address. Lora and Chuck found the building, a dingy, forbidding front, with a cluttered entrance. They knocked on the door. A grizzly face appeared at a round hole.

"Martin ain't here," he said in answer to their query. "Who's the darlin'?"

"This is Miss Martin, his daughter."

The eyes at the peep hole widened. "So that's the gal he's been sending all his dough to. He's made a lady of her, has he? Well, come on in."

They went inside reluctantly. Chuck holding Lora's fingers tightly.

"Your old man's in the jug," the bewhiskered doorman informed them. All about the room were tables; staring, muttering men.

"Martinez's gal," they said to one another. "Get the swank? Poor devil, he's paying for it."

"The grizzly man said, "Listen here, sister, your old man's in a tight spot. They caught him with the goods this time. Someone squealed on him.

"I suppose you don't know any of the things the old man's had to do to keep you in them good looking clothes?"

Lora was on the point of fainting. Chuck said, "Tell us where he is, so that we can go to him. She didn't know—about her father."

"Father, that's good. Well, at that, he treated her better than most fathers treat their kids."

The doorman told them the address of the jail. "He'll be in the infirmary. One of the cop's bullets caught him in the lung. He'll never get out of this fix. Go on along, sister, cheer him up."

* * *

Tears flooded Manuel's eyes as he lifted himself on one elbow, in the narrow hospital cot. A guard watched him hostilely, his hand on his gun. But Manuel was beyond need of watching. He gazed lovingly at his daughter, held one of her hands, one of Chuck's.

"You will be good to my baby?" he said. "Mon Dieu, I tried all these years. I wanted her to have everything, and now at last I am bringing disgrace to her. Forget this Manuel, little angel. This is an ugly dying Manuel, who is caught the thief. Remember the other one. Call me 'Daddy' once more."

Lora whispered the name tearfully, close to his ear.

Chuck said tensely, "Is Lora your own daughter, Mr. Martin?"

Manuel Martinez looked wistfully at the girl. "No, she is the child of a wealthy Spanish family who lived in South America. One day, peons robbed the house and killed my mother, the wife, and all the servants. I alone escaped with the child. I loved this little girl as my own. I had saved her parents who were kind to me. So I decided she would want for nothing. All these years, I have found money for her, this way and that way, but when I became old, money was not so easy to find. That is all. I robbed people to give her money. I was caught and shot.

"Now I am ended. I have called her 'Martin' so that she will never be confused with 'Martinez the thief.' Will you care for her now, take her forget—seeing me here?"

His Last Sleep
Lora Clung Weeping

Chuck pressed th old man's hand solemnly. Lora buried her face close by Manuel's tired old face and wept.

"Oh, daddy, why didn't you tell me? Why didn't you let me help? I would have understood. Don't you know, all those lovely things you bought me, everything, making me feel like a rich girl—they've cost your life. They're nothing to me, nothing, everything! I love you so and you've killed yourself—for me!"

Manuel, her, his eyes lighting for a brief moment with happiness. The bristling guard turned away his head. Old Manuel closed his eyes in a peaceful sleep. Lora clung to him weeping.

Back in the seashore Chuck, with one arm about Lora, was explaining to his mother:

"You see, when Lora's father died so suddenly, that left her all alone and I promised him I'd care for her. That was why, as soon as we settled his—his business affairs, we were married right away, in New York."

Chuck's mother folded the girl in her arms.

"I understand," she said, "and I'm very happy over your decision. You are my daughter now, Lora. We'll try to make up to you, dear, for all that you've lost. Our home is your home now."

CHURCH NEWS

'GREAT LITTLE MAN' TO PREACH TOMORROW

Among the preachers at the Union Services of the Unitarian and Universalist churches of Boston held at the Arlington St. Church there will be tomorrow the Rev. J. Ernest James, minister of Kensington Chapel, London, England. He has been called by his colleagues of England and Australia the "Great Little Man." He has earned this title through his capacity, for although short of stature he has done a big work in both countries. Although ministering to large congregations and accustomed to talk before large audiences he is said not to have sequired the aloofness that so often comes to those who work with large pathies and audiences. Indeed, he has a wonderful capacity for understanding people and giving of himself in their joys and sorrows. It is told of his early days in the ministry that he adopted the guise of a tramp purposely so as to know the down and outers as one of them.

Frequently he stayed at the East End Salvation Army lodging houses as a regular boarder in order to understand those whose lives had not been cast in the same lot with his other parishioners.

At the present time he is president of the London Congregational Union.

CHURCHES CO-OPERATE IN "SUPPLIES"

Through an arrangement entered into by two Unitarian ministers, the Rev. Anita Trueman Pickett of Barnstable and the Rev. J. Ernest Bryant of Brewster, these churches will have for visiting ministers this summer men from New York City Philadelphia, Boston and Marlboro.

Rev. A. T. Pickett

These clergymen come every fortnight, and preach in one church in the morning and at the other church at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Next Sunday, July 26, the Rev. Elijah Paisquist of Philadelphia will be the preacher.

For a time the Rev. Anita T. Pickett was an associate minister with her husband. Clergymen who are to fill the pulpits of these churches this summer include: The Rev. Charles R. Joy, administrative superintendent of the American Unitarian Association, and the Rev. Herbert M. Gesner of Marlboro.

Catholic Schools Grow Larger

The 21st annual session of the Summer School opened in Washington, D. C., June 30, and enrollment was completed Friday, July 3, with approximately 1000 students. Nearly every State in the Union is represented, and also Canada, Cuba, Porto Rico, Santo Domingo and Mexico.

The first session of the Catholic University Summer School began on July 1, 1911, with a total enrollment of 284 students. Sixteen departments of the University offered from one to three courses, the largest number, eight, being offered by the Department of Education. Forty-eight members of the University staff, as well as visiting instructors, taught the 33 classes, which inaugurated the summer session. In 1931, 74 instructors representing 28 departments, are offering 231 courses, and this year the Department of Education again leads, with 33 courses, as many as were offered in the whole school at its first session 20 years ago.

Dr. Sullivan Back at St. Paul's Cathedral

Dr. Edward T. Sullivan of the Episcopal church, Newton Center, has resumed after a year's absence the position of "Summer Dean" of St. Paul's Cathedral on Tremont st. Dr. Sullivan, until last summer had a record of 16 years without a break. His temporary absence was due to a needful rest for his eyes. His return this season during July and August is a matter of satisfaction to his many friends. He will not, however, take on the duties of "Preacher" from the steps, a function which will be assumed by the Rev. Dr. Phillips E. Osgood of Minneapolis. The out-door service is at 7 p. m.

Dudley Street Church Has Supply in Pulpit

The Rev. W. Reid, Baptist state convention secretary for Rhode Island, will be in the Dr. Brooks' church tomorrow morning and evening. There will be a special music program.

Dr. Brooks is abroad this summer visiting the Scandinavian countries, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and other localities where he is making a study of church conditions.

Another Rhode Islander will follow Dr. Reid on July 26. In the morning Commissioner Reid will preach on "Paul's Master Passion" and in the evening on "The Gospel."

Retreats Held at Cenacle Convent

The following retreats will take place at the Cenacle Convent, Brighton:

A Retreat for Married Women, from July 28 to August 1, will be given by the Rev. Charles F. Barry of the Oblate Fathers.

A General Retreat from August 13 to August 16, over the Feast of the Assumption of Our Lady, will be conducted by the Rev. J. J. Colligan, S. J., of Fordham University.

Cliff Haven Summer School Increases

Four hundred were in attendance at the first Family Gathering of the season held in the auditorium on Sunday evening. On Monday morning the first sessions of the Fordham University extension were held, with a registration in the neighborhood of 225 students, an increase over that of the last session. All in all the season's launching augured well for the success of the following weeks.

Archbishop Flies to Africa

His Excellency Archbishop John Dellepiane, Apostolic Delegate to the Belgian Congo, was greeted there by airplane on a visitation of the vicarates of the Congo. In an address of welcome Bishop Roch Grison compared the delegate's arrivals with his own coming 24 years previously when a month of travel was unheard of. Archbishop Dellepiane departed by plane for Lisala.

College President at Park Street Church

Tomorrow morning and evening at the Park St. Church, President W. B. Greenway of Beaver College, Jenkintown, Pa., will occupy Dr. A. Z. Conrad's pulpit. He is known for his clear method of expressing truth, and the public is cordially invited to attend both morning and evening services. Dr. Conrad will be back for the first Sunday in September.

Bullock in Final Service at Lakeview

Edward A. Bullock, pastor of the Lakeview Union Evangelical Church, Waltham, will preach his final sermon there today. He will be ordained in his new pastorate at the First Baptist Church, Marlboro in September.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—NO MAN IS EVER WITHOUT A TOY

By HELEN ROWLAND

BEHOLD, when a damsel waxeth to womanhood, she putteth away childish things. But in all the days of his life, no man is ever without a TOY to solace and amuse him.

* * *

For, verily, verily, every man is born a playboy. And the woman that holdeth his love forever, is neither the sophisticate that impresseth him, but the Toy that keepeth him eternally AMUSED!

HELEN ROWLAND.

As a small boy, with an air rifle, as a babe with its first pair of shoes, so is every man with his newest toy.

* * *

As a child that buildeth a house of blocks, so is a man that seeketh to solve a puzzle. Neither danger, nor weariness, nor fear of sudden death can draw him therefrom until he hath finished.

* * *

As a tot with a new train of cars, so is a man with a new motorcar. For, one day he taketh it apart and the next he putteth it together. And his delight in tinkering with its works is beyond understanding.

* * *

Yet, alas, what woman can persuade her husband to regard a spade and a lawnmower and a garden rake as playthings?

* * *

Lo, for an whole hour, will a man take joy in displaying the workings of a new patent sprinkler, while his friends stand about and shout, "Hear, hear!"

* * *

But when his wife urgeth him to drag it about the lawn on a hot evening he will pick up his hat and depart in haste, suddenly remembering an appointment.

* * *

For, verily, verily, every man taketh his toys seriously; but his work he taketh lightly.

* * *

Yea, he laboreth always half-heartedly. But he PLAYETH with his whole soul.

* * *

And let not any wife be disheartened so long as she remaineth ONE of her husband's "toys," wherein he findeth amusement!

Take Early Care in Ailments of Kidneys

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

A COMMON and often neglected disease of the kidney is that condition known as "hydronephrosis."

Dr. Copeland

Hydronephrosis, as the name implies, is an enlargement of the kidney, due to obstruction and the retention of fluid. It is brought about by a disturbance in the mechanics of the kidney.

A kidney stone, a twist in the drainage tube, or an obstruction in any portion of the tract leading from the kidney to the bladder, holds back the urine. Because the urine cannot pass on into the bladder, it is forced upwards into the kidney. When the accumulation is great it produces pressure, of course, and this may cause necrosis, or death of the kidney tissue.

The kidney gradually enlarges. More and more urine collects in the kidney because it has no avenue of escape. In spite of this it is surprising how slight is the pain in this condition. When pain does occur it is severe while it lasts, but it quickly subsides.

This trouble is often neglected, for you possibly. When it is finally recognized the kidney has been damaged to an extent far beyond hope of recovery.

In advanced cases it is necessary to resort to surgery, perhaps with removal of the diseased kidney. Surgery in these cases is imperative, because if the condition is permitted to drag on, damage will be done to the other kidney.

If the pain is severe, the trouble makes itself known at once. If recognized early and the cause of the obstruction is removed, it is very probable the kidney will be saved.

I speak of these cases to encourage the victim of hydronephrosis. But, of course, early attention is far better than the necessity for radical surgery.

GRAND HOTEL

The Sensation of Europe and America

"AFTER THE performance there's a farewell supper at the French Embassy," continued the Baron's chauffeur. "It'll be over by two o'clock. Tomorrow at eleven Grusinskaya leaves for Prague, two days there, and then Vienna. What I'd like to know is how you're going to get the pearls off her today between the performance and the supper, if it's all to go right. You couldn't ask for better than that unlighted hole of a theater courtyard," he added, with an attempt to assert himself, but he did not look at the Baron, who meanwhile was putting on his evening clothes.

"She's not wearing the pearls any longer. She just leaves them in the hotel," said Gaigern as he tied his back tie. "She said so in fact to some idiot of an interviewer. You can see it in the newspapers."

"What? She just leaves them, she hasn't even handed them over to be kept in the hotel safe? she hasn't even handed them over to be kept in the hotel safe? What? You can just go into her room and take them?"

"Seems so," said Baron Gaigern. "Now I want to rest a bit," he said to his gaping accomplice. He saw the gaping mouth with its black and decayed teeth and a sudden fit of rage came over him at the thought of the kind of men he was mixed up with. The muscles of his neck contracted.

"Out," was all he said. "Be at the main entrance with the car at eight."

The chauffeur looked at Gaigern's face and retreated meekly. He could not utter a word of all he had on the tip of his tongue.

Just before eight that evening the Baron made his appearance in the lounge. He was in excellent form. He was wearing his blue raincoat over his dinner jacket and it never entered the head of Pilsheim, the hotel detective, that this engaging Apollo was industriously preparing an alibi.

Dr. Otternschlag, who was sitting in the lounge with the exhausted Kringslein over coffee before going to see Grusinskaya together, raised one stiff finger and pointed it straight at the Baron. "Look, Kringlein, there's the Baron!"

The Baron put a coin into the hand of page boy No. 12. "My kind regards to your girl," he said, and stepped to the hall porter's desk. Senf looked at him with alert though sleepless eyes. (It was now the third night and still he had to keep his anxiety to himself.)

"You've got my seat for the theater? Fifteen marks? Fine," he said. "If anyone inquires for me, say I'm at the theater and after that at the West End Club," he said, and turned to Count Bohna.

"Imagine whom I came across there: Rutzov, that tall fellow, Rutzov! Wasn't he with you and my brother in the 74th Uhlans? He's in the motor trade now. You're all of you such competent fellows. It's only I who am good for nothing, a lily of the field, eh? My chauffeur there yet, Senf?"

He took an atmosphere of warmth with him through the revolving door, and in the lounge all eyes followed him with an indulgent smile. He got into his little four-seated and went off after his alibi. At half-past ten he even rang up the hotel from the club.

"Baron Gaigern speaking. Has anybody been to inquire for me? I'm speaking from the West End Club. I shall not come in before two, or even later. My chauffeur can go to bed."

At the very moment that this voice on the telephone was establishing a gentlemanly and unpremeditated alibi Gaigern himself was clinging to the front facade of the Grand Hotel between two blocks of imitation sandstone. His position was not exactly a comfortable one, yet he enjoyed it. It filled him to overflowing with the joy of the hunter, the fighter, and the mountain climber.

He had lightheartedly kept on his blue pajamas for the undertaking, and on his feet he had light chrome-leather shoes such as boxers wear. Over these, in case of accidents, were woolen socks, a pair that he used for winter sports. They were a precaution against leaving undesired footprints. Gaigern was on his way from his own window to Grusinskaya's room. He had just short of seven meters to go in all and he was now halfway.

The sham sandstone of the Grand Hotel was copied from the rough hewn blocks of the Palazzo Pitti. It looked magnificent, and as long as it did not break away all was well. Gaigern carefully embedded his toes in the recesses between the blocks. He had gloves on and he was finding them a thorough nuisance. Nor could he pull them off while he crawled like a beetle along the wall of the second story.

"Damn," he said, as mortar and molding broke off and fell a floor lower onto the zinc roof of a balcony. He felt his throat getting dry and he husbanded his breath like a runner on the cinder track. Once more he came to a halt, supported himself for a moment at the risk of his life on the toe of one foot, and then got the rear leg half a meter farther on.

He whistled and kept a cool head. As to the pearls, for the sake of which he was there, no thought of them entered his head.

Sport Frock Continues Popular

CABLED FROM PARIS.

PARIS, July 18—The popularity of the sports frock continues unabated. Somehow it seems that the trig lines of such a frock suggest the businesslike, trim, neat woman that one sees everywhere.

That every important designer and every small house includes a whole section of sports clothes in each and every collection is proof that such frocks have come to stay.

* * *

The new sports frocks would make even the most languid woman ambitious to get out each day for a brisk constitutional. Especially is this so of the sports frocks created by Chanel. Sketched is one of her newest models in natural jersey with white pique collar, tie and cuffs. The removable bolero has two patch pockets and two pockets are worked into the tops of the wide panels of the slightly flaring skirt.

DID SHE CRAVE REAL LIFE?

In the Mad Whirl of Parties

By WINIFRED BLACK

SHE'S DEAD and gone—the Jazz Baby.

Poor Jazz Baby, what a gay life she had.

Parties and joy rides, and breakfasts in the early dawn at queer little road houses.

Suppers at 2 in the morning at queer big road houses.

All kinds of men flocking around—rich men, poor men, beggar men and thieves.

Winifred Black

Judges and lawyers and a doctor or two, and a good-looking young mechanic, and two or three actors; the rich man's son, with the vacant eyes and the chin that didn't mean much. The poor man's son trying to "see life" before he settled down to work his way through a rather tiresome world.

What a queer world she chose to live in, the poor Jazz Baby.

Perfumes and pajamas and beauty treatments and shampoos. Telephone calls, messenger boys, radios, screaming day and night; a new pair of silk stockings a day, a new, frilly frock a week, and never a real friend in all the world.

And she was born in a comfortable home, with a good father and a good mother, and aunts and uncles and cousins and kin folk, hither and yon.

But she threw them all away just as if she had emptied a waste basket of rubbish. And the other day they found her dead—poor Jazz Baby.

Was it a suicide or a murder?

Nobody knows and I'm afraid nobody cares—very much.

Poor Jazz Baby, I wonder if she ever wished she was just a plain, everyday girl with one sweety and a hope chest and a little home in the suburbs waiting for her as soon as Jim got his raise?

I'd like to know; wouldn't you?

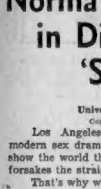
Norma Shearer to Appear in Different Role in 'Smilin' Thru'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, July 18—Having scaled the heights in modern sex dramas Norma Shearer is wise enough to want to show the world that she can play something besides a gal who forsakes the straight and narrow.

That's why when she returns from her vacation she will get herself immediately into the mood to star in "Smilin' Thru." Mood is what I mean, for no actress could give so inspired a performance as she does in "A Free Soul" without getting in tune with the character.



Louella O. Parsons

"Smilin' Thru," with Norma Talmadge as the ethereal heroine, will always be remembered as one of the most delicately romantic pictures of the silent days. Miss Talmadge will be seen in the movies as soon as her mother's health permits. She is at the hospital every moment she can spare, cheering her mother, Mrs. Peg Talmadge, who is making a remarkable recovery.

Some of our film producers may have forgotten Alice White but the fans are still loyal to her. Balaban and Katz, Chicago motion picture theater owners, reckoned with that popularity when they signed her on a four weeks' engagement at $2500 a week. She will do a combined song and dance act. And please, Alice, don't be dignified. Try to be your old-time, gay young self. Harry Weber signed Miss White and it looks as if the much talked of Estelle Taylor contract will soon be signed, sealed and delivered. All that stands between Estelle and the job with the Earl Carroll "Vanities" is a mere $250 a week. She wants $2000 and his latest offer is $1750. Estelle's publicity hasn't hurt her a bit when they will pay that amount.

Hollywood may have a chance to see Nancy Carroll's bridegroom. All depends whether the two turtle doves can bear to be separated while Nancy comes West to be co-starred with Buddy Rogers in "Mary Makes a Call." I am told the Carroll-Mallory romance started at Miami, Fla., and grew and grew until the editor of "Life" led the actress to the altar. "Mary Makes a Call," authored by Homer Mille, is the story of a woman's regeneration and it will be one of Nancy's last for Paramount. Incidentally, last time Buddy Rogers' fifth appearance with Mrs. Bolton Mallory?

I had a talk with Louis B. Mayer, who has been spending the hot spell at his desk on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. L. B. said he envied me my vacation, but he didn't sound as if he meant it. Personally, I think he is enjoying hard work. He is passing on all of the casts for pictures and not a picture is made ready for production without his okay. One of his latest selections is Guy Kibbe for a leading role opposite Charlotte Greenwood and Bert Lahr. If the screen play has as many laughs as the stage play, it will be a tonic for the picture public.

DIANA FITZMAURICE and BEBE DANIELS likewise wearing pajamas. PATRICIA FITZMAURICE, age seven weeks, who threatens to be a beauty, vamping a caller who visited the nursery. MILTON GOLDEN, good-looking young assemblyman, lunching with MICKEY FLYNN. LORETTA YOUNG, in sleeveless dress and big hat, being greeted by several friends at the Brown Derby. ROBERT SHERWOOD, his wife, SIDNEY HOWARD and VICTOR FLEMING, an interesting group at the same place. MICKEY NEILAN, arm in sling, explaining how he hurt his wrist fishing. HOWARD HUGHES entertaining a party on his yacht. JOE E. BROWN and the missus glimpsed at Sam Holland's roof. That's all today. See you Monday!

BEAUTY AND TALENT FASCINATE IN VOICE AND VISTA

Mitzi Green adds to the joy of living in "Forbidden Adventure" at the Metropolitan.

Charming Marion Davies intrigues Leslie Howard in "Five and Ten" at Loew's State." Mr. Howard means to hold off, but the actress lures him on. It's a corking good motion picture.

Barbara Stanwyck is captivating in "The Miracle Woman," feature at RKO Keith.

Loves Liberty to Win Love

An engrossing story, brilliant acting, expert directing and ultra-lavish settings, make Norma Shearer's new screen drama, "A Free Soul," at Loew's Orpheum, an outstanding picture. Miss Shearer never looked more stunning than in this dramatic and fast-moving story of a modern girl whose theories of freedom estrange her from those she loves.

A genuinely entertaining vaudeville bill is offered also. Heading the array of attractions is the magician, Huber, who has magic, mystery, illusion and comedy sidelights. An efficient company of young ladies assist him in his stunts. His "million dollar" trunk mystery is a feature of the act.

Castleton, Mack and Owen offer a riotous comedy act of slapstick nonsense and hokum. Billy Kelly and the Paige Sisters are seen in a pleasing comedy song and dances offering, and further entertainment is provided by Opera versus Jazz, a comparison of both types of music, and by Al Libby and Betty in their novelty bicycle act.

Dix Champ of Public Weal

Richard Dix is seen in his latest vehicle "The Public Defender," at the RKO Boston, and on the stage are Herman Timberg and his Timberg Comedy, Timberg as the headline attraction. Flo Ziegfeld's "Whoopee" girl, Frances Upton, and the songwriter, J. Fred Coots, entertain with a cycle of songs. Mr. Coots has written such successes as "I Still Get a Thrill Thinking of You" and "That Precious Little Thing Called Love."

The Fall of the Woman and Her Rise Theme of the Photoplay

By HARRIS MORGAN

Barbara Stanwyck wrings the pathos out of a sterling role in "The Miracle Woman," film based on the stage play and now at RKO Keith's. There is abundant tense drama connecting through the plot, with alleviation from time to time in good comedy; and the melodrama of a woman's regeneration makes unusually compelling movie fare.

Miss Stanwyck, always alluring, rises neatly to the demands, which are not to be sneezed at by any actress. She has capable support, notably in Beryl Mercer, David Manners and Sam Hardy, and Frank Capra directed with his usual skill; so the motion picture values are properly cherished, the story sweeps along with speed appropriate to the tempo developed, and the cameras are always working deftly and surely. The narrative centers about a young girl who becomes embittered toward her fellow beings when her father, a minister, is deposed because he is getting too old to hold the interest of his congregation. He dies of heart-break and something in the girl dies, too, for she lets go and joins forces with Hardy, cast as a trickster who says you aren't a hypocrite if you admit it, and there is only one side to be on—the winning side.

It looks as though he has the right idea, for the Temple of Happiness they set up flourishes and prospers. In it great crowds daily are exhorted by the girl to have faith. She is credited with all sorts of cures.

Then one night a blind youth (Manners), who had changed his mind about committing suicide when he heard her voice over the radio saying that only a coward is a quitter comes to one of her meetings and evidences his faith in her by joining her in a den of lions, from which she preaches. He is the only one outside of fake converts who has ever done this and it touches her deeply.

How the boy's love for what he thinks the girl is redeems her and leads her to defy Hardy—to confess to her thousands of admirers that she is a liar, a cheat, a sham—rushes the story of "The Miracle Woman" to a climax that is only tautly dramatic.

Taj Temple of Love in Film

The Fine Arts theater, having given German, French, Spanish, Russian and English films, now turns to the Orient. The current cinema is based on a famous story of the Taj Mahal called "Shiraz." It was taken entirely in India and the cast is made up of high-born Hindus. The costumes, the hordes of elephants, and the great crowds of retainers, were provided by the Maharajah of Jaipur.

Himansu Rai, who plays in the title role, is an Oxford graduate and is the leader in India of the Little Theater Movement.

The story itself is of the great emperor, Shah Jehn and how he came to build the Taj Mahal.

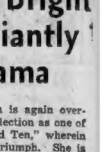
Marion Davies Is Bright Star of This Brilliantly Acted Photodrama

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

That rare blue moon in the movie heaven is again overhead, and this week at the full! For an easy selection as one of the banner pictures of 1931 is here—"Five and Ten," wherein the acintillant Marion Davies achieves a new triumph. She is surrounded by one of the ablest casts seen in many a month; and for her in particular this is an outstanding success, for this ace of comediennes turns in the peak performance of her career. She is here for the most part of the way a dramatic actress, doing a difficult role, one that has its unsympathetic angles; but the star gracefully and cleverly meets every demand and achieves a characterization that is as real as reality. She makes the daughter of the five-and-ten-cent store magnate in the Fannie Hurst story a most appealing and convincing figure, genuine to the last ounce of her being, bringing the laughs or the smiles, and just as facilely evolving the heart throbs.



Marion Davies

Miss Davies and the players about her shine resplendently, and they make "Five and Ten" a thing of breath and vigor on the Loew's State screen. But theirs is not the entire honor, for Director Robert Z. Leonard has done an amazing job, so that his cameras speak out that most eloquent language they have of golden sweep and swing which turn the silent passages into magnificent additions to the throated narrative. The dialogue, too, sparkles; rich, for instance, are the passages between Miss Davies and that sterling leading man, Leslie Howard, now to be acclaimed one of the best in filmdom, the equal in poise and personality of Ronald Colman. Cosmopolitan, likewise, shares in the laurels; as is its wont, the producers of this photodrama for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have made it practically perfect, technically and in lavishness of settings.

• • •

Right here let another word be said in especial praise of Miss Davies. In most films the star gets the full glare of the spotlight, and the cast suffers. But this is not the Marion Davies way. She wants the best talent about her, and it is a tribute to her that in the company of stars she shines as the brightest of them. Thus it happens that "Five and Ten" is a picture that all should miss. Equally as fine as young Mr. Howard is Richard Bennett, superb as Barick, the father of the newly-rich family, crashing the gates of the socially elite. There is Irene Rich, finished in her acting and entrancing in her looks; and Kent Douglass, strikingly good as the youth whose sensitive soul drove him to suicide in the sorrows that came, along with sin, into the Barick household. Even the very minor characters are the most capable of hands; for instance, the smooth Hallwell Hobbes, as the butler.

Through attention to every feature and every detail, "Five and Ten" becomes a gripping picture, as interesting as pages from the book of life. Its dramatic intensity is cumulative, rushing onward to the stirring climax. The Baricks seem very human, and the audience is intrigued into sharing their joys and their woes. Miss Davies has now added new glory to her record as a foremost actress in light comedy. In this, her first straight dramatic role, she is distinctively triumphant.

"Five and Ten" is something to be treasured up as a warm memory of a superlative picture, acted, directed and produced in brilliant manner.

Old Stan Stasiak Toughest of Tough Tears Them Apart ↑ Wrecked Godfrey He'll Be in There ↓ On Mat, July 30th

They Always Hand Old Stan Wrecking Job

Gus Sonnenberg's a tough 'un, Count Zarynoff is, too—
They muss up their opponents until they're black and blue
But put 'em down in cellar with old Stan Stasiak,
It's dollars to a doughnut Old Stan would break their back!
The Polish Lion can rough it with the roughest of the rough,
And when it comes to toughness he's the toughest of the tough.
Remember this, dear reader, for we want you to know
Old Stan will rough up someone at the Christmas Basket Show!

The Grapple of the Century, which will bring together Henri DeGlane and Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg at Braves Field one week from next Thursday, will be accompanied by a whole flock of other matches which would be headliners on any card except the Great Grunt and Groan Ensemble arranged in aid of the Christmas Basket and Allied Funds of the Boston Evening American. All the favorites will be there. Greater wrestlers than Stanley Stasiak will clamber onto the mat, and one, Count Zarynoff, perhaps is more colorful. But the toughest of the lot, and surely, next to Zarynoff, the most colorful is Stasiak.

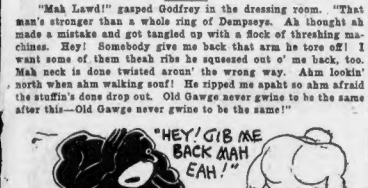
Old Stan is getting along in years. But he still can take 99 per cent of the youngsters and bend them into bowline knots and boatswain's hitches. In a rough and tumble we doubt if even DeGlane or Sonnenberg would like the idea of getting tangled up with the Lion of Poland. Dynamite Gus is a pretty tough 'un himself. But put Gus and Old Stan down in the cellar and lock the door and a lot of us would be willing to wager Old Stan would be the one who would come out. And he probably would be lugging one of Sonnenberg's disengaged legs or arms, or mayhap an ear or two with him. A tough, tough Old Bird is Old Stan.

Old Stan is so tough he chaws tenpenny nails and expectorates tacks. He's even tougher than the guy who lived down by the Winegar Voiks. He's the original Tough Guy from Tough Street. You remember him—"I'm tough. See! I live on Tough Street. See! The further you go the tougher they grow, an' I live in the last house on Tough Street. See!"

Because Old Stan is so tough they recently picked him to take some of the wrestling aspirations and ambitions out of George Godfrey, the giant Leiperville Black. Godfrey was the Black Menace of the ring. He recently invaded the mat. Won several preliminaries and the crowd behind him started to ballyhoo him as the Black Threat of Grappling. "We must get rid of Godfrey!" the word went out in grappling. "He isn't going to do wrestling any good. Besides, why are these boxers butting into our game? Somebody has got to get Godfrey and get him quick!

They wished the task of making the giant Godfrey jump through, roll over and play dead on Old Stan Stasiak. And maybe Old Stan didn't do a good job. It all happened up in Toronto. Old Stan didn't pin Giant Gawge's shoulders to the mat. He squashed them in so hard that spectators thought all that would be left would be an ink spot. In the little more than 10 minutes Stasiak let Godfrey "stay," he almost wrenched, pried, tore, ripped, rended the Black Giant to bits.

"Mah Lawd!" gasped Godfrey in the dressing room. "That man's stronger than a whole ring of Dempseys. Ah thought ah made a mistake and got tangled up with a flock of threshing machines. Hey! Somebody give me back that arm he tore off! I want some of them theah ribs he squeezed out o' me back, too. Mah neck is done twisted aroun' the wrong way. Ahm lookin' north when ahm walking souf! He ripped me apaht so ahm afraid the stuffin's done drop out. Old Gawge never gwine to be the same after this—Old Gawge never gwine to be the same!"



"Give back my ear," moans Godfrey, "and also back my arm!
Ah want no mush with rassle', ahm goin' back to the farm!
Ahm willin' to rassle rasslers, but this yeah Stasiak
Am a ringtailed orang-outang—Mah Lawd! He's brak mah back!"

Picking apart the giant George Godfrey to see what he was made of and leaving him looking as if he had been run over by an army tank was just a minor detail in Old Stan Stasiak's gay, young life. Just a part of the job. After finishing Godfrey Old Stan had nothing to do till tomorrow. He hopped the night rattler and woke up in Boston, where, after the missus had broiled him a whole beef critter, which Old Stan chawed and crunched, bones and all, using the hoof to pick his teeth with, he hied himself to Braves Field to meet Nick Lutze in a preliminary to the DeGlane-George match.

Many of you saw that Stasiak-Lutze match. You saw how Old Stan had Nick's shoulders pinned to the mat and how Nick fooled the old boy by slapping him on the back and making him think the referee had awarded the fall. Remember the look on Old Stan's face when he got up, apparently triumphant, only to find that Lutze had phenigled him out of the fall? Ha! Ha! The Missus, who "had a mad on" against us, laffed so hard at Old Stan's discomfiture and baffled rage that she forgot her grouch and giggled sweet nothings in our ear!

Put Old Stan on against Nick Lutze, Mister Bowser, at the Big Grunt and Grapple on July 30. Let's see if Nick can fool him again! If Nick doesn't want to go in the den again with the Polish Lion, then toss some other tough one at Old Stan. Every time Old Stan goes on the mat you'll find the Missus and I right up in the front line trenches.

When Stasiak's billed to wrestle, we want a front row seat.
Spectators go into spasms—he has a whole show beat!
He should be nicknamed "Sore Ribs," for strain he sure makes sore,
And makes us sore from laffin', but still we howl for more!

QUEEN HELEN AND LONGWOOD BOWL DUELISTS

HELEN WILLS, Queen of the Courts, and her satellites will reign at Longwood today when the big tournament will end in a blaze of glory. Above you see the world's greatest woman tennis player after a serve. The top male player is JOHNNY DOEG. Below him is the sensational young Californian, ELLSWORTH VINES. Doeg and Vines will meet in the final for the Longwood Bowl.

WORLD MARK IS SET BY GIRL

New York, July 18 (AP)—Fourteen-year-old Katherine Rawls of Hollywood, Fla., and New York, is the new women's national A. A. U. 300 meters medley swimming champion and the new world's record-holder at that distance.

Less than five feet tall and tipping the beam at about 90 pounds, Miss Rawls splashed her way to victory by 20 yards over the defending champion, Eleanor Holm of New York, here last night and set up a new universal standard of four minutes 45 4-5 seconds for the event. Miss Holm set the listed world's record of 4:49 4-5 at Honolulu in 1929.

Miss Rawls gained a lead of ten yards in the first 100 meters—at breast stroke style—held on to maintain her advantage in the second 100 meters at backstroke, where Miss Holm has been supreme for four years, and then added heavily to her advantage in the last third of the race, swam free style.

Helen Madison Also Set New Record

Miss Rawls' record-breaking race was the second of the night. Earlier, Helens Madison of Seattle, Wash., shattered the world standard for 1000 yards by swimming the distance against time in 13 minutes, 23 4-5 seconds. Martha Norelius of New York set the listed mark of 13.39.2-5 at Massepequa, N. Y., in 1927.

Miss Madison now holds every world free-style mark except that for 100 meters and she will attempt to smash that tomorrow.

Sarah Palfrey Loses to Dorothy Andrus

Rising to great tennis heights, Miss Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Ct., grasped the Longwood women's invitation singles crown today.

The powerfully built Connecticut player, who has often come within the shadow of the crown but was never able to make the final grade created a sensation when she defeated Miss Sarah Palfrey, the diminutive young Bostonian and national junior champion of 1930. The score was 6—2, 1—6, 6—4.

The point score gives a bird's-eye picture of the battle between the two prominent women tennis players. It follows:

FIRST SET

Andrus	....	4	8	6	4	1	5	4	—36—6
Palfrey	....	6	6	4	6	4	3	0	0—25—2

SECOND SET

Andrus	.....	3	4	2	4	3	5	1	—24—1
Palfrey	.....	3	6	4	6	5	7	6	—35—6

THIRD SET

Andrus	.	1	4	4	1	4	5	7	5	6—33—6
Palfrey	.	4	1	0	4	2	6	5	3	2—22—4

The end of the first set today found Miss Palfrey with only two of the games to her credit—the first and the fifth.

In the second set Miss Andrus appeared to become nervous and was unable to cope with the swift serves of the Brooklins girl. However in the last set which was a nip and tuck affair, Miss Andrus gained her composure and steadily downed her opponent.

Moody-Wightman Team Beat Palfreys in Doubles

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, playing with Mrs. George W. Wightman of Boston won the women's doubles title today defeating Sarah and Minne Palfrey 2-6, 6-4, 6-3. The Brooklins sisters carried off the first set due to the service errors of Mrs. Moody who play erratic tennis. She steadied down and, aided by the deadly placements of Mrs. Wightman emerged with the victory.

Questions for a Champ

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

A reader of the Boston Evening American sports pages wants Gus Sonnenberg, who begins today a series of lessons in wrestling, to answer a few questions which, he says, have often brought him to the mat. We have sent the following questions to Gus, asking that he answer them in his articles.

1. How can I break my wife's strangle hold on my pay envelope?

2. How can I successfully toss insurance agents without being arrested for assault?

3. How can I force my opponent to grab dinner check?

4. What is best defense against "aeroplane whirl" after I drink modern gin?

5. How can I throw a party without having the neighbors call the police?

If Gus can't answer these questions, we will.

MANAGER WHITE SLUGGED OVER HEAD BY COP WHO DISLIKED THE DECISION

Washington, July 18 (INS)—Jim Londos, recognized in New York and Pennsylvania as the "heavyweight wrestling champion of the world" today nursed bruises on the head inflicted by several men in a mob of 12,000 that resented the method he used to floor Rudy Dusek at Griffith Stadium last night.

He retained his title but lost the favor of the spectators. Dusek elected to rest awhile on the mat after Londos knotted Rudy's upper body in a "new" hold he invented, but the latter held the crowd's respect.

The reporters called the affair a near riot. It started when Londos' hand was raised as the victor. A policeman was among the first to enter the ring. He wanted to arrest Londos for using his new grip but Londos pushed him aside. There was no time to bicker with an officer, for thousands of angered spectators were pushing toward the ring.

Ed White, Londos' manager, was aiding Londos to escape from the ring when, according to reports, a policeman's billy came down on White's head and he reeled almost on the spot where Dusek had reclined.

Londos started a rush for the dressing room, now accompanied by a group of police who did not want to arrest him. The crowd followed and it was at this point that he was struck several blows. He did not retaliate.

UNITED STATES WINS DOUBLES MATCH

Roland Garros Stadium, Paris, July 18 (AP)—The United States assumed a lead of two matches to one over England today in the international Davis Cup tennis series. George Lott and John Van Ryn scored a decisive victory in the doubles over George Hughes and Fred Perry. The scores were: 6—1, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3.

The young Americans outclassed their rivals, except in the third set. Their volleying, service and all-around team play proved much too effective for the British pair.

Victory in one of the remaining two singles matches scheduled tomorrow will send the United States into the challenge round against France for the fourth straight year.

Frank Shields, who beat Perry in the singles yesterday, will oppose Henry W Austin, who was the victor over Sydney Wood, Jr. Wood's opponent will be Perry.

Recapitulation of stroke analysis:

	Plcmts	Aces	Nts	Outs	D.F.
Lott	18	2	24	21	2
Van Ryn	13	0	15	18	0
Perry	6	0	32	139	8
Hughes	12	0	20	17	0

	Earned Pts	Errors	Tot Pts
Lott-Van Ryn	33	86	122
Perry-Hughes	18	99	98

Yates to Compete in Service Meets

Wallace "Dobbs" Yates, former South Boston high and University of Maine football and track star, will represent the Massachusetts State staff detachment in the annual track and field games at Camp Devens, Worcester and Fitchburg next month.

The peninsula boy will compete in the 100-yard dash and expects to keep in condition during the summer as he will enroll at Duke University next fall.

Noted Yachtsman Dies Suddenly

Baltimore, July 18 (AP)—J. Rulon Miller Jr., contractor and yachtsman, who recently sailed his schooner from New London, Conn., to Cape May in the annual yacht races over that course, died suddenly today of a heart attack at his home at Gibson Island.

He was president of the Empire Construction Company, and a native of Pennsylvania.

BIKE STAR IN REVERE DEBUT

A young Italian, Joe Maltese, said to be a second edition of the great old Vincent Madonna, makes his debut at the Revere Cycle Track tonight in the one-hour motor-paced race, the feature of Nat Butler's weekly card.

Maltese has already appeared in New York and Philadelphia and critics rate him highly. He is game and a fighter and is expected to be even better than his more famed countryman, Signor Franco Georgetti, before much water goes under the bridge.

Tonight, Maltese will be in for a test of his ability that will make him ride his very best. He will meet Al Letourneir, Frans Duelberg, Charley Jaeger and Freddy Spencer.

In a 15-mile amateur championship motor paced race, Al Keith, Joe McGann, Anthony Insans, Peter Callas and Bruno Laura will face Starter Dan Barry's gun. Keith's record is better than his rivals' and he will be favored to chalk up a victory.

Big Shot for Baker If He Wins Monday

Leslie Baker, Watertown welterweight, faces a brilliant future if he can hurdle Werther Arcelli, his Italian rival in the 10-round wind-up of the Argonne A. A. show at Braves Field, Monday night.

Already Promoter Eddie Mack is working on a plan to bring Jimmy McLarnin here to meet Baker if he wins Monday night.

Millionaire Golfer Wins Amateur Title

Providence, R. I., July 18 (INS)—Flashing from behind in the last two holes, Tommy Tailer, 19-year-old millionaire of Newport, retained his title as amateur golf champion of Rhode Island by defeating Brad Oxnard of Metacomet, 1 up.

Resnick Puts Out Soccoli, 7 and 6

Norwich, Conn., July 18 (AP)—Burt Resnik, New Haven, sprang a surprise today by defeating Dominic Soccoli, New Britain, 7 and 6 in a semi-final match of the sixth annual invitation tournament at the Norwich Golf Club.

Title Canoe Meet at Worcester Today

The Eastern division of the American Canoe Association will hold its canoe paddling championships at Drake Island, Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, today and tomorrow.

Bouts Last Night

By the Associated Press
Chicago—Johnny Burns, Oakland, Cal., outpointed Ray Tramble, Rockford, Ill. (10).
Louisville, Ky.—Charley Baxter, Louisville, stopped Al Dexter, Indianapolis, (1).
Utica, N. Y.—Sonny Graham, Utica, stopped Kid Tabor, Salt Lake City (3). (Tabor refused to fight).

FINAL TILT FOR CURLEY CUP

The Beacon A. C. and Clan McGregor soccer elevens will clash tomorrow at Franklin Field in the final match of the two-game series for the Mayor James M. Curley Cup.

The Beacons won the first tilt, 2 and 1, and as a result will have a one goal margin going into tomorrow's fray, the issue being decided on total goals.

In case of a tie at the end of the regulation periods, the teams will battle to a decision and the cup will be presented after the game.

Two Title Events in Salem Swim Meet

The largest swimming meet ever held north of Boston takes place this afternoon at Salem Willows Park, Salem, with the cream of the local crop of men and women swimmers entered. The first race begins promptly at 2:15 p. m.

Two New England titles and one Essex County crown are at stake this afternoon.

Mets-Old Colony Race Meet Today

The first of a series of inter-club matines race meets between Metropolitan Driving Club and Old Colony Driving Club will get underway this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the South Weymouth fair grounds. A program of at least 10 events will be raced off, with more than 40 trotters and pacers listed to face the starter. All races will be at mile heats.

'Mug in the Plug Hat' Is the Lord Mayor of Halifax

New York, July 18 (AP)—Into the Yankee Stadium where a ball game was in progress between Cleveland and New York, there strode yesterday a man in a silk topper. The naive New York citizenry was nonplussed.

"Who can it be?" said the newspapermen in the press box. "Imagine a silk topper in a ball yard. Odd, we calls it."

A reporter wrote a note. It said:

"Who is the mug in the plug hat?"

The note was dropped over the railing to an usher. The usher thought the missive was for the man in the topper, so, without reading it, handed it deferentially to that personage.

The "mug in the plug hat" read it, smiled, removed a card from his pocket and courteously sent it to the press box. The card said:

"George E. Christie, Lord Mayor of Halifax."

Cleveland won the ball game, 3 to 1.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Keeping your arms and wrists even with the club as you start the back swing promotes several factors of advantage to you. First it has a tendency to slow down your start. Usually the back swing that is too fast is too fast wholly because it starts too quickly from the ball. Keeping everything even, too, delays wrist breaking. Breaking your wrists back sweeps the clubhead back very rapidly from the ball. In the picture is a starting back with arms, wrists and clubhead even, and the dotted line "A" shows where your club would be at the same point in the back swing, but with quick-breaking wrists. This latter, of course, gets the clubhead too far advanced, and at some point you will be required to get things in unison again.

FRED WRIGHT HAS 4 HOLE LEAD ON ED LOWREY

CHAMP HAS EAGLE, THREE BIRDIES

By BILL GRIMES

During the first 18 holes in the finals of the 27th Massachusetts amateur championships this morning at the Winchester Country Club Fred J. Wright, Jr., Albemarle, the defending champion, piled up a four-hole advantage over Edward E. Lowery, Norfolk, a former title-holder.

For 18 holes Wright played better, steady and heady golf.

He was even fours over this stretch but a 5-7 finish mounted his medal score to 76. Wright was out in 37 and had a 39 for the inward round against Lowery's 39 to the turn and 24 for the last nine which gave the Norfolk golfer an 81 for the morning round.

Although Lowery equalled par on ten holes just as did his opponent, he was unable to better par during the entire round while Wright had one eagle and three birdies.

Partially responsible for Lowery's inability to hold Wright closer than four holes was his failure to negotiate short putts. Lowery used up 37 putts on 17 holes, having been conceded a five on the 13th where Wright holed out from off the green.

Wright Proves His Class Early in the Match

Wright canned putts for birdies at the second, sixth and 16th holes and at the 13th hole he chipped in from 40 yards off the green for an eagle 3. At the sixth hole Wright's iron from the tee left him only about two foot putt for a deuce, while at the 16th he ran in a 16-footer for a birdie three after Lowery had hung his approach putt on the lip of the cup.

Lowery's outstanding achievement this morning was at the fifth hole where he lumped a dead stymie for a half. Lowery was home at the first hole with a drive and an iron, but Wright pushed his second shot slightly and the ball was lodged on the side of a hill.

Lowery made a great try for a three after Wright had chipped dead and the hole was halved with four. Wright went home with a long second shot on the next hole, Lowery being short and after chipping one lost the hole to Wright's birdie four.

Lowery Squares Match at Third Hole

Wright got into a couple of creeks going to the next hole, which enabled Lowery to square the match with a 5, one over par.

Lowery hooked his drive from the fourth tee over on the third fairway and Wright followed suit but his bender was not as wide as his opponents. Lowery's second landed in the trap and Wright was short. They both chipped on and need two putts to get down to half in 5.

Wright Stymies Lowery at Fifth

They both were home at the fifth hole, but Wright's approach put laid Lowery a dead stymie, which he negotiated with a mashie-niblick to halve the hole with 4.

Lowery hit a fine iron to the sixth green, but Wright followed with a better one and, from the tee, it looked as though he was going to hole out for an ace. His ball hit on the near end of the green and ran dead for the pin, but it stopped about two feet short and, after Lowery had just missed his mashie-niblick shot and got for his second birdie, to be 1 up.

After they had halved the seventh with regulation 4's Wright crashed a beautiful tee shot which split the middle of the fairway, but Lowery pulled his drive and followed with a hooked second shot which ran down between the 8th green and the 9th tee.

Wright was short of the green in 2 and Lowery failed to get home with his third, landing on the bank at the left of the green from where he pitched on, running 25 feet beyond the cup.

Wright 2 Up at the Turn

Wright faded an iron into the trap at the right of the ninth green but Lowery was on. The champion played a beautiful shot from the hazard, running about three feet beyond the cup. Lowery's putt was off line and he was still away. He trickled in his second for a three and Wright followed his example for a half to os two up at the turn.

There were both home in two at the 10th, and after Lowery had made a fine bid to drop a long putt the hole was halved with fours. Playing into the wind at the 11th, Wright brassied his way to the green, but trap and looked high into the fairway from where he pitched to the far end of the green, winding up two and one-half putting to 3 down as Wright got his par.

Wright was well out in front of his opponent going to 12th from the tee, and his second was just short. Lowery pulled a brassie shot on top of the mount about 20 yards short, his ball lodging in a hole, causing him to go over with his third.

Wright chipped strong, running 15 feet beyond the cup, and, after Lowery trickled one down to within 5 feet, Wright approached dead and won the hole with a 5 as Lowery missed his putt.

From the 13th tee Wright was well down on the plateau and Lowery was trapped, from where he came out well and got a clear opening from the green for his birdie.

Wright hit a terrific brassie second to within 40 yards of the green. Lowery was just short in 3, and Wright chipped in for an eagle to be 3 up.

Both Players Messed Up the 17th Hole

Wright caught the trap at the 14th, but got a half, as Lowery three putted. Going to the 15th Wright was short in two and Lowery was to the left of the green, from where he chipped on, and after Wright's approach had run well by, Lowery brought a new putter into action and canned a long one for a win.

Both were home nicely at the 16th. Wright playing a fine iron from the rough and, after Lowery's approach putt stopped at the rim of the cup, Wright curled in a 15-footer for a birdie three.

They both messed up the 17th hole, Wright needing three to get down from the edge of the green, and it was halved with 5s.

Wright was trapped at the 18th, hit a bunker and a tree coming out and was short with his third, while Lowery was just shy with a long second.

Wright's fourth ran through the trap onto a bank and then Lowery elected to play safe by chipping onto the green instead of over the trap.

His approach putt was sour, stopping about 12 feet short of the cup, but he finally won the hole with a 6, as Wright missed a three-footer for a 5.

CALDWELL IS LEAGUE LEADER

New York, July 18 (AP)—Bruce Caldwell, the former footballer and the official "Chuck Klein" of the Eastern League, finally fell below the .400 mark during the past week, but he still has a stranglehold on most of the circuit's batting honors.

Through Wednesday's games the New Haven slugger was banging the ball at a .391 clip, 12 points higher than his closest rival, Rosenberg of Bridgeport, and still was leading the pack in home runs, total hits, runs batted in and runs scored.

He had hit 27 home runs, knocked in 88 runs, made 118 safe hits and scored 67 times himself. Caldwell's individual brilliance has not been sufficient to win for New Haven in the second half race, however. The club has won only five of its first 16 starts, compared to 12 victories and two losses for Bridgeport through Friday's battles.

Other leading hitters in more than 100 times at bat include Reis, Hartford, .375; Rodrigues, Allentown, .347; Bryan, Bridgeport, .344; Parham, Hartford, .341; Smith, Norfolk .332; Murray, Richmond, .329; Danning, Bridgeport, .328; Jarrett, Allentown, .320; Lehman, New Haven, .318.

6, as Wright missed a three-footer after getting on.

JACK SHARKEY SHOULD BE 1-10 SHOT

By BILL CORUM

New York, July 18—Come, come, gentlemen, let us be honest, or failing that, let us be as honest as we can. They are quoting Jack Sharkey a 9-to-5 favorite over Mickey Walker along the big line. He should be a 1-to-10 chance. Let me show you why I think so:

He will have a 30-pound pull in the weights.

He will have so much the best of it in the matter of reach that nobody has bothered looking up the figures.

He is a better boxer than Walker in his hey-day, even assuming that his hey-day is not past.

Walker has fought Gorilla Jonsese and Dundees and Latzos and Swiderskis; fellows whom a man could be stuck in jail for putting in the same ring with Sharkey.

Walker Has Burned Candle at Both Ends

Walker has burned his candle at both ends, and it was a lovely light in many midnight soirse, but it didn't do his wind, muscle and recuperative powers any good.

Walker is the more natural fighter, and his heart is as far above reproach as Caesar's wife at a meeting of the ladies' aid. But all a sound valentine gets you when you are outpointed is a double portion of beating.

Walker comes in as wide open as a swinging door just after the fat lady has come in. Of his past performances it is not a question if Sharkey can hit him, but if he could miss him if he tried.

Mike hits quite hard for a little fellow, but a lot of guys who hit hard for big fellows have failed to shake the sailor loose from his sea legs. He dropped his hands, let Dempsey wind up and hit him with both Sunday special, and still wasn't knocked cold. So he must take a fair punch.

His is in superb physical condition, so if they go the scheduled 15 panels—which they never should do—he should be stronger through the last five rounds than the toy bulldog.

Diamond Dust

The Warriors had to be satisfied with an even break in Cincinnati, the Reds winning the fourth and final game, 5 to 0, thus snapping Fred Frankhouse's winning streak, which had reached six. Fred "Red" Lucas, a former team-mate, held the Tribe to five scattered hits and blanked them, but as he did during the Howleymen's last visit to the Wigwam.

The series in Redland produced some great pitching on both sides, Lucas and Ogden each held the Braves to five hits while Brandt and Cunningham gave the Reds but four and five safeties, respectively.

Both the Athletics and the Senators came through with victories yesterday, so a margin of seven games still separates the American League leaders and runner-up. Fresh "Lefty" Grove, Macklan ace, turned in his 19th win in 21 starts this season, beating the Yanks, 4 to 3, while the Solons banged out 21 hits to wallop the White Sox, 12 to 7.

The Giants nosed out the Cubs, 6 to 5, for their lone victory in a four-game engagement and climbed back over Hornsby's men into second place, 5½ games back of the champion Cardinals, who were beaten by the Robins.

Wes Ferrell, Cleveland ace, was the whole show while beating the Yanks, 3 to 1, for his 13th win of the campaign. He held the opposition to three hits, one Babe Ruth's 23rd homer of the season, and then won his own game with a circuit drive.

Jumbo Jim Elliott, Brooklyn castoff, won his 13th game for the lowly Phils, by beating the Pirates for the second time in the series.

JACK SHARKEY, HARVARD, ELI TRACK TEAM WINS ABROAD

Stamford Bridge, London, July 18 (AP)—By capturing the last two events, the Yale-Harvard track and field team today defeated the combined Oxford-Cambridge forces. With first places alone counting, the final score was 7½ to 4½.

Two international meet records were broken and a third equalled by the victorious Yale-Harvard performers.

The only double winner was Eugene Goodwillie, of Chicago, the former Cornell University star, running for Oxford. He captured the 100 and 220-yard dashes.

Yale's athletes captured four first places. Harvard and Oxford won three outright and divided honors in another, the high jump. Cambridge's only victor was Denison in the three-mile run.

Red Record, Harvard ace and Eastern intercollegiate champion, finished no better than third in the 120-yard high hurdles, won by Gerard Devoe of Yale in 15-10 seconds.

Goodwillie made it a double sprint triumph by capturing the 220-yard dash for the British forces, but the American collegians held a lead of 3 to 2 on points for five events.

Pearson Hallowell, of Harvard, the eastern intercollegiate mile champion, won his distance specialty in record time for the meet. His mark of 4 minutes, 19 seconds, beat the time of 4:20-6-10, set by H. B. Stallard of Cambridge in 1921.

DeVoe's winning time of 15-1-10 seconds in the high hurdles equalled the meet record, made by C. C. Weightman-Smith, the South Africa ace, in 1927.

Kilcullen Set a New Mark in Shot-Put

Another meet record was surpassed when Kilcullen of Yale tossed the 16-pound shot a distance of 47 feet, 4¾ inches.

The old record of 46 feet 8 inches was made by Frank of Harvard in 1927.

Kenton Farrell of Brockton, Mass., Yale broad-jumper, placed fourth with a leap of 20 feet 8 inches.

100-yard dash—Won by Goodwillie, Oxford; second, Watkins, Harvard; third, Fates, Yale. Time, 10 1-5 seconds.

Half-mile run—Won by Cobb, Harvard; second, Townsend, Oxford; third, Forbes, Harvard. Time, 1 minute, 55 2-5 seconds.

Shotput—Won by Kilcullen, Yale, 47 feet, 4¾ inches; second, Crowley, Yale; third, Tisdall, Oxford.

120-yard high hurdles—Won by DeVoe, Yale; second, Tisdall, Oxford; third, Record, Harvard. Time, 15 1-10.

220-yard dash—Won by Goodwillie, Oxford; second, Wade, Cambridge; third, Ingram, Yale. Time, 22 4-5 seconds.

220-yard low hurdles—Won by Record, Harvard; second, Tisdall, Oxford; third, Fates, Yale. Time, 25 1-10.

High jump, tie between Kuehn, Harvard, and York, Oxford, 6 feet; third, Whiteside, Yale, 5 feet, 10 inches.

One-mile run—Won by Hallowell, Harvard; second, Price, Cambridge; third, Cornes, Oxford. Time 4 minutes, 1seconds.

Three-mile run—Won by Denison, Cambridge; second, Poole, Harvard; third, Fox, Harvard. Time, 16, minutes, 44 2-5 seconds.

Broad Jump—Won by Lang, Oxford, 23 feet, 8½ inches; Munro, Cambridge, 23 feet, 2½ inches; third, Morse, Harvard, 21 feet.

440-yard run—Won by Warner, Yale; second, Hodge, Harvard; third, Tisdall, Cambridge; time, :50¼.

Pole vault—Won by Williams, Yale; 13 feet 7 inches; Sutermeister, Harvard, and Ogilvie, Cambridge, tied for second, 12 feet.

Victim of DeGlane Is "Much Improved"

Worcester, July 18 (AP)—Jim Browning, wrestler, who suffered a brain concussion after being thrown from the ring by Worlds Champion Henri DeGlane in Saturday night's wrestling program at the Industrial building last night, is reported much improved this afternoon at City hospital.

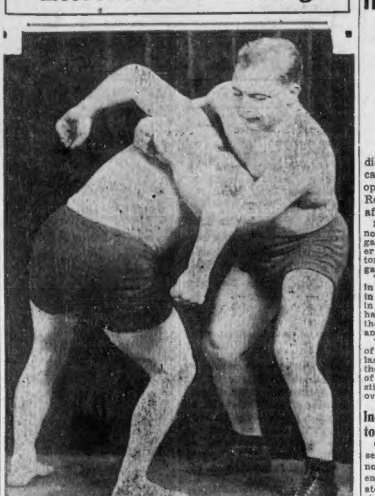
Lessons in Wrestling



THE DOUBLE ARMLOCK

Here's DYNAMITE GUS SONNENBERG, who meets Henri DeGlane in The Grapple of The Century, for the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American, demonstrating the double armlock on JACK ALBRIGHT. George Grimm tells you about the hold in an accompanying article, the first of a series of Sonnenberg lessons.

By GUS SONNENBERG
Former All-American Football Star at Dartmouth and World Wrestling Champion
As told to George Grimm

There is no hold in wrestling any stronger than the hold wrestling itself has on the American public.

I have consented to write a series of articles for the Boston American for a two-fold purpose: first, the instruction of Young America in the art; second, to make clearer to the average wrestling fan, man or woman, the reason and manner of various holds and their effect.

First you start with the referee's hold, each contestant usually puts a hand around the other's neck by which neither has an advantage. From this particular hold each looks for advantages and can secure almost any wrestling hold seen on the mat today.

The above illustration is a double arm bar, which may be developed from the referee's hold by pulling the opponent's head forward and slipping both arms under arm pits and across the back with locked hands. After this hold is secured you can either pick opponent up and swing him to the ropes or by holding on, have a chance to turn him on his back and pin his shoulders.

This hold I use most frequently and is one of the most deadly holds in my bag of mat tricks.

The reason for this being one of my best holds is due to my physique, which is shortness of stature and general size.

Another lesson will be printed on Monday.

DeGlane to Get Long End of Title Purse

By JACK CONWAY

Henri DeGlane, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, will receive the lion's share of the purse when he defends his title against Gus Sonnenberg, former champion, at Braves Field a week from next Thursday night.

It was revealed today that Paul Bowser has agreed to give DeGlane 20 per cent of the receipts and that Sonnenberg will pull down 20 per cent. This is the first time that the Dynamiter has been on the short end of the money in any of his Boston matches.

Sonny is the card here and has always got the big end of the purse, DeGlane, however, is the champion, and at first insisted that he receive 37½ per cent and that Gus get only 12½ per cent. The former Dartmouth hero refused to accept 12½ per cent and then the compromise of 30 and 20 per cent was made.

DeGlane and Sonny will each engage in minor matches during the first part of next week, and will then go into training for their title contest at Braves Field.

I believe Young Jack Thompson proved he has plenty of courage when he stepped into Worcester and permitted the fans in Lou Brouillard's home city to see him in a public workout. Thompson looks in perfect condition for his ten-round meeting with Brouillard at the Boston Garden on next Thursday night.

Brouillard has also been training in Worcester and says he is confident he will defeat the champion.

Thompson's appearance in a Worcester gym was a surprise move. He believes it was a bit of strategy which will upset Brouillard.

INDIANS PLAY SOX HERE TODAY

By JOE CASHMAN

Cleveland's fourth-place Indians, strongest of the American League's Western entries, open a four-game series with the Red Sox at Fenway Park this afternoon.

Strange to relate, there will be no doubleheaders during the engagement, unless inclement weather causes one or more, as the visitors played all their scheduled games on their last visit to town.

Though the Peckmen have been in on near the first division and in the vicinity of the .500 mark in the standing all season, the Sox have had better success against the Forest City outfit than against any other rival in the circuit.

The natives made a clean sweep of a three-game series in Cleveland early in the campaign and though they have dropped five out of eight to the Indians since, they still have a one-game advantage over the visitors.

Indians Almost Sure to Finish Fourth

Cleveland promises to finish the season in the same position it now occupies. It hasn't quite enough class to worry the A's, Senators or Yanks, but it is far too strong to be overtaken by any of the second-division clubs unless it suffers another slump such as it did early in the race when it dropped 13 games in a row.

Bold, bad holdouts threatened to wreck the club before the season opened and these same b.b.h. have been largely responsible for the success it has enjoyed to date.

Pitcher Wes Ferrell and Outfielder Earl Averill didn't sign up until the last minute and the race had begun before First Baseman Eddie Morgan agreed to terms. Without these three players the Indians would have their troubles keeping out of the cellar.

FATE OF EUROPE HANGS IN PARIS PARLEY TODAY

reach an agreement in principle with the Germans beforehand.

On the way down from Berlin this morning Dr. Curtius said he and Chancellor Bruening are headed for London and it would be "unfortunate if arrangements for the meeting there were changed."

Nevertheless in a statement issued by the Chancellor shortly after his arrival here, it was indicated he is determined to reach an agreement on some sort of settlement as a basis for establishment of real peace.

REAL ENTENTE SAUGHT

In this respect the French are in thorough accord, with Premier Laval upholding Aristide Briand's cherished ambition to achieve a real entente with Germany.

Unless something happens to alter the present schedule, there will be a general conference tomorrow morning attended by Secretary of State Stimson and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, representing the United States, and delegates from great Britain, Italy, Belgium and Japan.

In a brief talk with Premier Laval this morning, Secretary of State Stimson was given an optimistic impression of the prospects for a successful outcome of negotiations with Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius.

NO U. S. GUARANTEE

It was learned the United States had formally notified France the American Government as such cannot in any way guarantee an international loan to Germany and that American participation can be only through private banking interests.

While the French proposals have never been announced, they are believed to entail the backing of the loan by German customs receipts and an international controlling committee to supervise German expenditures, somewhat in the manner of the defunct Dawes plan. The plan is said to have the approval of the American and British delegates.

Germans Hope for Best, but Fear Worst in Paris

Berlin, July 18 (AP)—The hopes and fears of the Fatherland went with her statesmen to Paris today to convince France that unless financial aid is forthcoming Germany's crisis may become Europe's catastrophe.

Millions of Germans were hoping that Chancellor Bruening and his foreign minister, Dr. Julius Curtius, would be able to secure French collaboration in a long-term loan or credits—and fearing that the political conditions attached to such assistance would be unacceptable to the Reich.

The chancellor himself, when he left, was optimistic that his parley with Premier Laval would inaugurate a new era in Franco-German relations.

Shortly before they left, President von Hindenberg issued a decree strengthening the government's power to suppress newspapers "endangering public safety" and compelling all papers of whatever political faith to publish emergency decrees and urgent appeals to the people. The failure of the anti-government press to print notice of the bank holiday led to this move.

Gottfried Treviranus, cabinet minister without portfolio, announced over the radio that beginning Monday bank restrictions would be relaxed to allow savings banks depositors to withdraw not more than 20 marks (about $4.60) daily from savings accounts and 100 marks (about $25) from checking accounts.

Berlin, July 18 (AP)—The Boerse committee today announced postponement of reopening of the stock exchange scheduled for Monday, explaining that resumption of business would be impossible until money and banking are back to normal. The produce exchange is still functioning under restrictions.

Attempts by Communists to renew Thursday night's rioting in Coblenz were nipped by the use of tear bombs. Police closed the Casterstrasse and cleared the streets without a shot.

France Still Balks on Big 7 Parley in London

London, July 18 (AP)—Prime Minister MacDonald and other high officials have cancelled their week-end plans pending the outcome of negotiations at Paris concerning Germany's financial plight.

An official communique today said Mr. Henderson would remain in Paris for a meeting tomorrow, but would report to Mr. MacDonald Sunday night in anticipation of a meeting of the British Cabinet Monday. The Cabinet is to consider the French government's acceptance of ministers of seven powers scheduled for 6 o'clock Monday evening.

French acceptance of an invitation to that meeting has not been received and it is understood that her participation depends upon the outcome of the meeting with Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius in Paris today.

It also is understood that some of the French conditions imposed upon extension of a loan to Germany are not entirely acceptable to Great Britain, and that the British viewpoint coincides in its major points with that of the United States.

King and Queen See Ancient Oak Afire

London, July 18 (AP)—The king and queen have been to a fire. Motoring through Windsor Great Park, they saw an ancient oak tree ablaze and stopped to watch the flames. Attendants and picknickers had set the 600-year-old tree afire in burning rubbish.

'NO STRINGS ON LOAN'—CURTIUS

Paris, July 18 (AP)—Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius while on the train en route to a series of vital conferences at Paris flatly denied this morning that any strings of any kind had been attached to their visit to France.

They discredited persistent reports that the French government had submitted a list of demands upon the fulfillment of which depends French participation in a loan to Germany.

"There have been no demands and no concrete proposal," the chancellor said.

Dr. Curtius added: "We would not be on this train if any such demands had been made."

"We are going to Paris," the chancellor said, "with no strings of any kind attached. We will enter upon frank discussion of the entire situation."

Dr. Curtius frowned when he was reminded of a general belief expressed in the French newspapers that the projected conference of ministers of London would be unnecessary in view of the Paris meeting.

"We are certainly headed for London," he said, "it would be most unfortunate if the arrangements were changed."

BOSTON BOOSTERS MASS FOR PORT BOOMING DRIVE

Hundreds Signing Up to Put City in Front as Ocean Terminal

Do your bit to help the port of Boston to its rightful position in the list of leading seaports. Join the hundreds who have enrolled in The Port of Boston Society, and who are now engaged in furthering the interests of their own city as an ocean shipping point.

Leaders in the business and professional life of Greater Boston stand back of the project to give Boston its old-time supremacy as a seaport.

BROADCAST ADVANTAGES

The Boston Evening American prints from day to day an application blank for membership in The Port of Boston Society. The American also prints from day to day the suggestions of prominent citizens to make the port of Boston the finest on the Atlantic seaboard.

Today the American prints the suggestions of F. E. Lyman, State Department of Public Works commissioner. Like many other farseeing men, he urges the spreading of the message that Boston has as fine facilities for shipping as any port in the world and that it would help a lot to make it the leading seaport if people could see its advantages.

BOOST BOSTON

Applications are continuing to pour in by the hundreds to City of Boston, Commercial, Industrial and Publicity Bureau, 80 Federal st. Boston.

Get on the band wagon and pal up with your fellow citizens by mailing your application for membership in the Port of Boston Society today. There is no obligation except the pledge to work actively for the interests of Boston's future as a seaport.

City of Boston, Commercial, Industrial and Publicity Bureau, 80 Federal Street, Boston, Mass.

Please enter my name upon the membership roll of "The Port of Boston Society." I am not to pay any dues. My only obligation is my moral support.

I hereby promise to loyally uphold the purpose for which this organization stands; namely, to help make Boston the finest and busiest seaport from Florida to Maine.

Name ..... Address .....

City or Town ..... Occupation .....

FOR my part I would like to illustrate as clearly as possible one of the principal drawbacks to Boston's forging ahead as a seaport;

ENTER the word picture I shall attempt to draw, a Mr. "So and So," prominent Bostonian who announces a contemplated trip to Paris and

LIKE the fellow to whom "anybody's yard looks better than his own" he proceeds to inform the Press that he has "sailing from New York";

YOU can get the rest of this picture quite plainly, I know; the newspapers print the story, it is read by the entire community and

MORE than we realize is done by this apparently unimportant incident to retard the growth of the Port of Boston because the helpful bit of

ADVERTISING his embarking from here would have circulated among those to whom his loyalty might well have served as an example, is lost;

NOW you have the completed word picture and I sincerely hope that it will come to the attention of MANY of these Mr. "So and So's!"

RIOT GUNS END BIRDS' ROOST

A volley from the riot guns of a squad of policemen greeted the return of a flock of starlings to their roost among the branches of a big elm tree at Wedgemere ave. and Calumet rd., Winchester, last night, and dozens of the birds dropped to the earth, dead.

The shooting of the starlings was being carried out by the police under orders from the selectmen as a result of the complaints made by residents of the district that the noise of the birds and the fluttering of their wings interfered with the slumber of the neighborhood. The practice of ridding the neighborhood of the birds by shooting them was inaugurated last year and found to be effective.

DOWNEY, RADIO STAR, BLINDED

New York, July 18—Although blinded, his head and hands swathed in bandages, Morton Downey was led to the microphone in the studio of the Columbia Broadcasting Co. here last night and insisted on going on the air in his regular Camel cigarette program.

Downey was severely burned and temporarily blinded Thursday night by the effects of a sun ray lamp. He visited O. B. Winters, vice-president of the Camel Cigarette Co., at his Madison Hotel suite. Winters is undergoing sun ray treatment for a leg injury and Downey made the mistake of sitting too near the lamp.

Aboard Submarine Nautilus, Devonport, England, July 18—The Nautilus is now almost ready for the next preliminary stage of its trip under the ice to the North Pole.

By working 24 hours a day, repairs to the submarine's hull will be completed by tomorrow noon, and everything will be ready to make a dive in the naval basin here. This will be for the purpose of checking any defects in the hull; the tides, however, will not permit us to leave the dockyards for Bergen, Norway, before Monday morning.

Polo World Mourns Death of Col. Morris

Mineola, N. Y., July 18 (AP)—The Army in general, and members of its polo teams in particular, today mourned Col. Willis V. Morris, U. S. A., who died at Nassau Hospital last night from injuries sustained a week ago in a polo game. He fell and his horse rolled upon him.

Col. Morris, affectionately known as "the father of the Army polo," captained and managed dozens of championship army teams.

PRICES MIXED IN NEW YORK DEALINGS

New York, July 18—Recording the smallest turnover of shares since Aug. 2, 1930, Wall st. trading was almost at a standstill today. The closing was mixed, with 139 issues showing gains and 138 registering losses, while 102 finished unchanged.

With foreign markets closed and Wall Street undetermined whether to be hopeful or gloomy over the prospects of relief for Germany on the International conference of cabinet ministers, traders decided to let the market while away the time as best it could.

367,170-SHARE DAY

The exact turnover was 367,170, although given out officially in the near "round number" of 400,000.

A trickle of week-end selling appeared early in the session, causing several recessions of 1 to 2 points, but the list turned in the last half hour, and closed with fractional gains predominating among the favorites.

U. S. Steel and American Can, after showing temporary reversals of about a point, recovered, to close virtually unchanged. A little bullish activity developed in the cigarette issues, with Lorillard making a gain of nearly 3 points.

Corn Products rallied about 2 points, possibly reflecting news that Penick & Ford will license its refining process to other corn refining companies. Wall Street understands that the savings are considerable and that the entire industry may benefit.

Allied Chemical, on the other hand, had a sinking spell, again reflecting the unsettling in chemicals, on failure of the International Nitrate Sales Cartel to renew its agreement. An extreme decline of nearly 2 points was largely regained, however.

SOCONY HELPED

Standard Oil of New York was helped by the report in circles close to the company that the current rate will be maintained on the new Socony-Vacuum stock at the next dividend meeting. The stock closed nearly a point higher.

New York Central sold off more than two points and recovered only partially in the late upturn. Otherwise, regained all of a two-point drop.

Week-end estimate of Youngstown steel operations indicated further slackening of output next week. Operations for the entire industry are expected to average 34 per cent of capacity, as against 38 a week previously. Republic Steel Corporation is expected to cut operations to 36 per cent, which contrasts with 50 per cent a fortnight ago.

Weekly mercantile reviews stressed the reports from retail trade as indicating a maintenance of fair turnover for midsummer, about equal to a year ago. Wholesale manufacturers continue to make about the best showing in industrial activity although there has been some slackening of cotton cloth output.

In a dull bond market the German issues made a little more recovery. Foreign exchanges were generally under pressure. Sterling dropped just below parity. The mark was nominal at 22.90 cents.

The cotton market, like stocks, showed unimportant changes. Closing prices were 5 cents lower to 20 cents a bale higher.

AMOSKEAG HAS BONDS RETIRED

Boston Stock Exchange is advised that on and after August 1, 1931, the Old Colony Trust Company will act as transfer agent in Boston for common shares of Amoskeag Manufacturing Co.

The exchange is advised that at a meeting of the trustees of Amoskeag Manufacturing Co., held on July 16, 1931, the treasurer was authorized to cancel and retire $1,537,000 face value of the company's 6 per cent gold bonds held in the treasury of the company.

The Exchange is advised that on and after August 1, 1931, the General Electric Co. will maintain its own transfer office in the city of New York.

Kendall Profits Show Large Gain

The Kendall Co. reports for the first 26 weeks of 1931 net profit of $240,510 after depreciation, bond interest, taxes and provision for dividends on preferred stock of subsidiaries in hands of the public, compared with $106,029 for the same period of 1930. Deficit for 1930 was $103,700 for dividends on Series A preferred stock, net profit to surplus was $136,810.

Balance sheet as of June 13, 1931, shows current assets, $6,641,937 and current liabilities, $1,175,797, with net working capital, $5,466,140,—a ratio of 5.6 to 1. Cash amounts to $1,390,119.

Johns-Manville Net 78 Cents a Share

Johns-Manville Corp. and subsidiaries report for quarter ended June 30 net profit of $1,057,937 after expenses, federal taxes, etc., equal, after preferred dividends, to 78 cents a share on the 750,000 common shares, against $230,109, or 13 cents a share in the preceding quarter.

COLT FINDS MURDER CLUE IN CHURCH

Improvised Letter Box of Beazeley and Mrs. Saunders Found Behind a Stack of Unused Books

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

CHADWICK'S LIP curled in a smile at the idea of the church being haunted.

"Oh, that!" he sneered. "I remember now. It wasn't important enough to keep in mind."

"I remember now, too," added Houghton, with a glance at Chadwick. It was plain the old sexton had gone through another third degree from the vestryman.

"Too bad you didn't recall it earlier," snapped Colt. "I hope your memories will be of more assistance to the police in other details. Now, Mr. Chadwick, what do you remember about it?"

"Let me tell you, Mr. Colt," pleaded Emma Hicks. "It was just light-hearted, frivolous nonsense of our young people—no harm in it whatever—you know how these things are——"

"Please be explicit! What happened, Miss Hicks?"

"Nothing, really—although for a while we all had a grand time shivering over what sounded like a grand ghost story. Two girls had come up from the basement, one night about 9 o'clock. One of them had left a book in here and opened the door. Then she screeched, Mr. Colt. I was in the choir room by the door closed and heard it all the way in there. Such a screech——was; it gave me a cold chill——"

"What had the girl seen?" interrupted Colt.

"She said she saw a ghost."

"Of what? Young—old——"

Colt looked at Emma Hicks and, after an appraising glance at Chadwick, she replied:

"It looked like a fairly young ghost, Mario said. And a few days later, two other girls said they saw it. And then, late one night, about a week later, somebody else, an old woman, said she saw the same ghost walking in the garden——how it got into the church—and, of course, the church is locked up at night."

"You know how those yarns go," scoffed Ellery Chadwick. "Why should we waste time talking about foolishness?"

Colt looked at him frankly.

PRACTICAL INTEREST

"My interest in the matter is wholly practical, as I have already told you, Mr. Chadwick. This has happened before. About 30 years ago the same story was told around Cheyne Walk on the Thames, in London.

"The scene was The Old Church of Chelsea, whose history dates back to the 13th century; it was reported that the shade of Sir Thomas Moore was often chased that still bears his name. Reliable persons testified that they had seen the ghost of the great chancellor emerge from a monument set in the south wall, cross the sanctuary, and melt into the opposite wall. Moreover, the spirit was without doubt conclusive evidence, because Sir Thomas, as you know, was decapitated on an axe."

"It's all stuff and bunk," said Ellery Chadwick, with an uneasy glance around him.

"It turned out," explained Colt, "that the ghost which they saw was in reality a vestryman himself, passing from a little door in one wall to the vestry across the church. He had a cape over his head and in the gloom he undoubtedly must have looked like a ghost of something."

A SECRET LETTER BOX

"Well, what else do you want to know?" asked Chadwick briskly.

"Not too fast. I am still after the ghost of St. Michael and All Angels."

Colt turned and faced Chadwick squarely.

"I have received information," he said, "which leads me to think a secret letter-box was in this church—or that some article of furniture, now architectural, some concealed place, was used as a postoffice by Dr. Beazeley and Evelyn Saunders."

"What if they did?" he cried. "Why drag this church into it? We didn't take part in it. This is our church——"

Colt drew back.

"I quite sympathize," he declared, "but I am faced with a duty and I must pursue it."

"I suppose you are right. Mr. Colt. Go ahead!"

And the vestryman sat down in a pew and closed his eyes as if in prayer. I liked him a little better that moment. We left him, Emma Hicks trudging noisily with us. At the head of the center aisle, Colt paused and said softly:

THE EXACT SPOT

"Perhaps the ghost was Evelyn Saunders, leaving or going for a letter. Or someone who was spying on her. That postoffice is somewhere close at hand. We ought to be able to find it. Though which one did the young ladies look at the phantom, Miss Hicks?"

"The middle one!"

"And when they looked through the middle door, where did they see the ghost?"

Emma Hicks puckered her brows.

"Well, I'm not quite sure, but I believe it was by the door——"

And the loquacious spinster fluttered hurriedly back down the aisle, and at the door to the side crossing to the right side, the eastern wall of the church.

"Made said it was right here," she called in a hushed voice.

"Thank you! You may wait for me in the study. You too, Houghton!" said Colt, hastening toward the place the secretary had pointed out. Emma Hicks' face was wrinkled with disappointment, but she was obedient and went out of the church. As she passed Chadwick, I saw her touch him on the shoulder. A moment later I heard the vestryman say "Amen." rise, and follow the secretary and the sexton into the study.

"If I were a preacher," I heard Colt mutter, "where would I hide a letter? Like the old parlor game of hot and cold, Tony—but played solitaire; those who did the hiding are out of the game. Where? Where?"

As I came return no answer to his repeated and entirely rhetorical question, Colt turned impatiently and walked nearer to the slanting sills of the stained windows. As he stood before them, colored light in one that he was still directly in line with the chancel rail, curving at the foot of the pulpit.

From this point Thatcher Colt crept backward, step by step, examining the walls and floor with a concentrated interest so deep, so profound, that I remained aloof, watchful, eager but utterly quiet. On the stillness Colt's voice came at last, tranquil but triumphant.

POST-BOX FOUND

"I have found the post-box, Tony."

With that announcement, he broke his own self-created spell of isolation. I darted to his side. Set into a box-like recess of the pastor wall was a slat-covered frame, shaped grotesquely like a marked basket. It was full of old books, all with stamped black bindings, and the top of the leaves were painted a cardinal red.

"Hymn books!" explained Thatcher Colt. "Old ones, too much used for further distribution, but probably kept here in case of a particularly large attendance some Sunday. They haven't been used for a long time; the echo is pretty thick. Now look here! Behind the books is a little recess, formed by the way the books are stacked. It would never be noticed, except by someone who was looking for it. Don't touch it, Tony—but notice now."

Colt produced his pocket flash-lamp and played its shaft of white light against the little dark cave fashioned by books and the slatted side of the hymnal rack. Far back, I saw a patch of white. Colt saw it, too.

"I believe a letter is in there now," he muttered.

Domestic Asbestos Output Gains in 1930

The commercial production of asbestos (figures available for chrysotile only) in the United States in 1930 increased 84 per cent in quantity, but declined 14 per cent in total value, in comparison with 1929. With the exception of 1918, 1930 was the year of the largest output of chrysotile ever recorded in the United States. According to figures published by the United States Bureau of Mines, Department of Commerce, from individual reports furnished by producers, the total quantity of chrysotile sold or used by producers in the United States in 1930 was 3653 short tons, valued at $273,292, as compared with 1983 tons, valued at $317,586, in 1929.

Auto Industry at Last Year's Level

Output of the automobile industry, exclusive of Ford, during June ran at approximately the same levels as in June last year, marking the first month of the current year to equal 1930 for this section of the industry. The principal factor in this improved comparative trend, it is likely to continue during July, was the gain of about 14,000 units in General Motors production over June last year, but was also assisted by advance shipments of new models by some independent producers which partially offset seasonal declines in other lines.

Allen Industries Net Profit Lower

Allen Industries, Inc., for the six months ended June 30, reports a net profit of $10,586 after charges and Federal taxes, as against $24,011 in the first half of 1930.

For the quarter ended June 30, net profit was $18,085, as against $64,627 in the June quarter of last year.

Railway Security Dividends Declared

At a meeting of the board of directors of Railway & Light Security Co., the board declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on the preferred capital stock and a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common capital stock. Both dividends are payable on Aug. 1 to stockholders of record July 20.

ANTHONY STOCK SEAT POSTED FOR TRANSFER

By FRANK H. MELOON

First posting of a Boston Stock Exchange membership for transfer in many weeks is that of the estate of Arthur C. Anthony. The late Mr. Anthony joined the exchange July 13, 1903. The seat is posted for transfer to John W. Adie, with Frederick L. Dabney and Irving E. Dunn as sponsors.

The transfer makes the first change in the mid-year issue of the Boston Stock Exchange directory, as issued by Secretary George A. Rich.

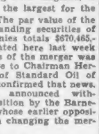
Giant merger of Vacuum Oil and Socony, covering New England, is likely to prove the largest for the present year. The pro rata of the combined outstanding securities of the two companies totals $670,465,215. It was stated here last week that the success of the merger was assured. A wire to Chairman Herbert Pratt of Standard Oil of New York has confirmed that news. The telegram announced withdrawal of opposition by the Harkness interests, whose earlier opposition resulted in changing the merger terms.

• • •

Mr. Pratt, who comes from an old New England family, has extended the paths followed by his humanitarian work. His father established the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, which has given many a boy a chance." He established the Maria Ida Camp at Chesham, N. H., many years ago as a vacation place for needy Brooklyn children.



Herbert L. Pratt

The Chesham Camp had the first broadcasting station in any small town of New England, and at one time, the only such station north of Boston.

There is much discussion of the Russian "Five-Year Plan," mostly by those who have never visited the land of the Soviets, and this helps to fill type space. Emphasis is laid on the "greenhouses" etc., where agricultural problems are being studied. No country has ever spent so much money in agricultural studies as the United States. Federal offices have been supplemented by agricultural colleges in practically all the states.

• • •

About the same time that public school janitors demanded and got more and there received the new title of "custodians," the agricultural college janitors have begun to hide their identities under new names. Why they should have been ashamed of the old ones, few can see. That true farmer is not proud of his calling? Unnumbered thousands of city people would like to have farms.

• • •

The Russians certainly cannot get very far in a mere five-year study of agricultural problems. After more than a half century of research by very able professors the farm colleges right here in New England have to agree regarding many important problems. They differ radically in their ideas for example, regarding the treatment of numerous poultry diseases. The principal effect of the Russian "greenhouses" in Wall and State Streets to date has been to bring forth protests against "dumping," and to encourage political mass marketing of goods.

City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan tells us his department for the City of Boston will receive bids until noon, July 22, for $1,250,000 3¾ per cent registered serial bonds and $1,088,000 3½ per cent registered serial bonds maturing 1932 to 1951. Bids must state clearly whether for whole or part of said loans. The bonds are issued for various municipal purposes.

Study of the duration of bull and bear markets in past years made by a economic service disclose that as a result the longer a bear market has lasted in the past, the longer the following bull movement has lasted. Since 1899 the durations of bull movements have averaged 1⅞ times those of the preceding protective bear movements.

On the assumption, therefore, that the present bear market, dating from September, 1929, is not omitting the five months of bull market in 1930, has lasted 11 months, it would have lasted 20 years is a possibility. The question at hand is when such a sustained advance will begin.

Financing Unit Is Formed by Baldwin

Baldwin Locomotive Securities Corp., has been chartered in Wilmington, Del., with 100,000 shares of common stock. Officials of the Baldwin Locomotive Works said the corporation would be used for financing purposes.

Berlin Bourse Is to Remain Closed

Berlin, July 18 — The Berlin Bourse will remain closed until further notice, the directorate decided at urgent session today. The Bourse was closed earlier in the week, but had been scheduled to re-open Monday.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Fast tickers were not needed today. There was not sufficient activity on the big board near the noon period to keep the tickers half of the time and the session dragged along at the dullest pace since June 13, when the turnover was 500,000 shares.

One Price for Gen. Motors in an Hour

American Can, U. S. Steel and other favorites drifted idly today through the narrowest of price ranges. Only one price—37, was quoted in General Motors through the whole of the first hour. This is remarkable for a stock as active and prominent as "Big Motors," which is generally expected to lead the way for the motor group.

Anaconda, Columbia Take Leadership

Copper steel, oil, copper and other important groups turned up the price scale in the second hour. Anaconda copper reached the best price of the day and Columbia Gas, at the head of the rally in the utilities, moved across a point from the opening price.

Reports on Business Fairly Encouraging

Entering the period of midsummer dullness, business and industrial reports today were fairly encouraging as showing a fair degree of evening appraisal and household goods. Earnings statements are holding well to expectations, one case making favorable comparisons with last year.

Three-Quarters of June Upturn Lost

At their lows of this week, stocks lost roughly three-quarters of the advance that started on June 20. With domestic trade in the throes of midsummer dullness, but none the less moving on a rather even keel, brokers point out that foreign news should hold immediate balance of power.

Railway Earnings Due for Increase

Rails acted better. Carrier earnings should increase during the summer as the large crops are moved. Meanwhile the financial difficulties of the carriers are being reiterated at the late hearing in Washington of Ralph Budd, receiver in railway securities have thrown their active support behind the Cleveland banker in the process will be granted.

New York City Bank Stocks Are Favored

The long term possibilities of the NATIONAL CITY BANK CORPORATION bond stocks are regarded as particularly favorable by Standard Statistics. Bankers Trust, Central Hanover, First National, Guaranty Trust, Bank of Manhattan Company and New York Trust.

American Home Products Earnings

Although American Home Products does not publish earnings semi-annually, it is stated by the company quarters that sales and profits in the first six months were in excess of the like period in 1930. The results this year will be stimulated by the acquisition of John Wyeth & Bro., Philadelphia. The trend of earnings of the latter company has been downward in recent years, but installation of a new management and new manufacturing methods is expected to make this unit as profitable as the other lines making up the Home Products organization.

Volume in United States Steel Common

Considerable comment was heard on the volume of trading in United States Steel common recently. On Wednesday, when the decline was in progress sales of the stock were in excess of 150,000 shares and resulted in a decline of 2¾ points. Thursday, with rallying tendencies prevailing, particularly at the close, the trading was much smaller, a gain of three points resulting from a total of slightly more than 113,000 shares. Bulls argued that the stock recovers easily whenever pressure against the general list is lifted.

General Electric's Half-Year Better

Predictions are made in the financial district that earnings of General Electric in the second quarter will be shown to have been slightly better than those for the first three months. Quite a number of important market interests who took a long position in the stock late in May have not increased their holdings during the fluctuations in the market.

Lorillard Dividend Possibilities Viewed

Some of the late buyers of Lorillard have been discussing the dividend possibilities and insist that this has been a consideration with most of those who have taken a long position in the issue. The advance in cigarette prices made about a month ago means more per share for Lorillard than for some of the other and high-priced issues. The stock appears to be getting more popular with the outsiders and several firms reported a better demand from customers than in some time.

Westinghouse Does Better

Westinghouse Electric is another company which showed some improvement in the second quarter. There was a big loss in the first three months and while results from the period just closed will not show any great showing, there are many who would not be surprised if a small profit could be shown after adjustments. Early in the second quarter the bears were predicting that Westinghouse would show a greater loss in the period than in the first three months.

Gould Coupler Co. Net Loss $102,557

Gould Coupler Co., for the quarter ended July 30 reports loss after depreciation, reserve for taxes, interest, etc., of $75,000, after a loss of $102,557, including liquidating loss of $27,542 of subsidiary companies. For the second quarter of 1930 net profit was $88,007, or 49 cents a share on 175,000 shares of class A on which there are no accumulated unpaid dividends. Approximately 95 per cent of Gould Coupler Co. common is owned by Symington Co.

TRADING DULL IN BOSTON AS WEEK ENDS

Trading was extremely dull on the Boston Stock Exchange today, with fractional changes prevailing. The list, for the most part, was firm, with gains overruling the losses. Textile shares displayed a firm tone with American Woolen preferred registering a fractional advance and Amoskeag remaining unchanged from its previous closing level.

Eastern Steamship second preferred lowered $1.50 a share to $18.50 in the short session at 44½. Mergenthaler dropped $1.25 a share to 78¾.

Mohawk was strong and finished the week at 18½, up $1.50 a share from its previous closing prices. Copper shares were represented by Anaconda and North Butte, both of which recorded fractional advances. Utilities were shown for American Telephone, Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred, Gillette, Lamson & Sessions, New England Telephone and Stone & Webster.

Losses of minor proportions appeared for First National Stores, General Electric, Swift & Co., and Warren Brothers. Boston Elevated shares were inactive. The common eased slightly while the remainder of the issues were unchanged.

On recommendation of the committee on Stock List and with the approval of the Governing Committee, there have been placed on the list $4,500,000 face vain First Lien and Refunding Mortgage Gold Bonds, Series E, 4½ per cent due 1951, of Houston Lighting & Power Company, the bonds to be dated June 1, 1931 and due June 1, 1981, with deliveries against initial transactions in the form of temporary bonds, and with transactions "when issued" permitted pending the delivery of the temporary bonds.
